Two Plans: Shoot, Hire Pigs That Dig Truffles Bankruptcy for Cities Socialism? It's Here

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THERE ARE two schools of what might be humorously called "economic thought" in the United States. The first is outlined in a letter signed F. G., addressed to Messrs. Vincent Astor, William Averell Harriman and Mrs. C. C. Rumsey, who publish a weekly.

The writer says he had "no part in the late financial madness," and has nothing left but "obligations fixed by law." He was a builder, employing men, paying wages, and now: "I stand among my worthless houses and wonder at the wreck of fifty years of economic thrift." This same "F. G." expresses his idea thus:

"I would like to shoot the worst of the population and put the rest to work for their bread and butter. Why should they live on me?"

That is one idea, shoot the worthless, put the others to work.

The idea, at the opposite end of the scale, is to encourage the worthless, encourage their belief that they are "as good as anybody," give them a thirty-hour week of five days, six hours a day, paying more than was paid formerly for a real week's work, and taking the money in taxes from those whose "base nature and lack of Americanism" has enabled them to make money.

Neither of the "new era" political schemes will work. This country will not try the experiment of "shooting the worthless population and putting the rest to work for their bread and butter."

Just at present, it is experimenting with confiscation through taxation in the hope of establishing overnight a little perpetual-motion Utopia.

But that will not work either. In the Perigord region, where muzzled hogs are used to root up truffles that they smell below the ground, it has been found necessary to give the hogs a fair percentage of the truffles. Otherwise, they stop digging. Government will find that its American money digger will also stop digging, if the government insists on taking it away from him as fast as he digs it.

"WHY DIG?" he will ask. "Why not go on the dole, or take a little 'bunch of money,' go to Switzerland or Canada and live at peace?"

The Senate has passed, the President is expected to sign a "municipal bankruptcy bill," which would allow cities that cannot or do not want to pay interest or principal on bonded debts go through bankruptcy like a Christian, and get rid of debt.

This will relieve some citizens now taxed to pay interest and principal, and relieve the minds of grafting politicians that have piled up the local debts.

It will not be so pleasant for gentlemen that preach high taxes for others, and invested their own money in tax-exempt securities. Municipal bonds are tax-exempt securities, and under the new law they may fade away like the Cheshire cat, leaving nothing but a pleasant smile.

Mr. Pollard, receiver for a bankrupt Southern railroad, hearing somebody say something about "government ownership of railroads," remarks solemnly:

"If this should happen, other industries would follow, and a condition of Socialism would prevail."

A railroad receiver is hardly one to speak convincingly against government ownership, for, after all, such ownership could not do worse than make railroads bankrupt.

As for Socialism, while Mr. Orville Wright, one of the brothers that invented the airplane, says we shall have "Socialism in ten years," others, who know what the word means, can tell him and Mr. Pollard Socialism is being tried here now, and also a polite form of Communism.

Socialism is a plan to regulate hours, wages, conditions of work, thus promoting the happiness of the greatest number. NRA is trying to do that.

Communism would take from those that have and give to those that have not, scattering the golden rain upon the just and the unjust, the thrifty and the thriftless. This nation is generously doing that with the taxpayers' money.

That Socialism has come already seems to be accepted by those that should know. All the assorted tints of "red radicalism" in New York paraded on Tuesday, Europe's Labor Day, one hundred thousand strong, in various groups, Communists,

$2000 TAKEN, VICTIM IS BEATEN

Real Estate Broker Is in a Hospital After West End Holdup

Four armed bandits, posing as Federal officers, today kidnaped a Boston real estate man in Leverett st., West End, carried him several blocks, beat him into unconsciousness and escaped with $2000.

Weisberg was rushed to the Massachusetts General Hospital, suffering a possible skull fracture.

Weisberg was seized as he emerged from a barber shop in Leverett st., where he had gone with his chauffeur, George McLusky, to collect the rent. McLusky was sitting at the wheel of the machine.

DEATH IS THREATENED

The bandits, with guns drawn, forced Weisberg to enter the car under threat of death if he made an outcry.

Once inside the machine with Weisberg, the bandits pulled McLusky's cap over his eyes and lifted him bodily over the front seat and into the rear of the machine.

One of the bandits then took the wheel of Weisberg's car and drove it to the Charles River esplanade and then to Embankment rd. and Otis pl., Beacon Hill.

When the machine was halted, two of the men held Weisberg and McLusky, while another went through their victims' pockets.

As the bandit took Weisberg's money, the victim began to remonstrate and immediately all four began to beat him over the head with the guns. It was only when he lapsed into unconsciousness that the men halted their attack.

OVERLOOKED $1100

According to the police, the bandit gang was followed by a fifth member, operating another car. As the second machine came alongside of Weisberg's car, the four men stepped into it and raced away towards the West Boston bridge towards Cambridge.

McLusky told police he was unable to get a look at the men fearing that if he turned his head he would be shot.

At the hospital Weisberg intimated to the police that the bandits had missed $1100 more.

Young Parents Happy Again

There's joy again in Southbridge. Baby Martin and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Martin, have returned from New York after an experience such as few babies ever had. The mother abandoned the three-week-old youngster there, and his father had to find him in a foundling institution. Then father, mother and baby were reunited, the baby was baptised and everybody was happy, as you see, on arrival in Southbridge. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.) Woman Held in Death of Mate by Stabbing

By FRANCIS P. O'NEILL

A complaint charging murder in the first degree was issued today in Roxbury court against Mrs. Ruth Goodrich Ingalls, 35, of aPrk drive (formerly Audubon rd.), Fenway, shortly after her husband, David Ingalls, 46, died in City Hospital from a knife wound in the thigh.

Ingalls, former professional ball player, a close friend of Marty McManus of the Braves and the next-door neighbor of John Spellman, the wrestler, was wounded under mysterious circumstances Tuesday night in his apartment.

A large carving knife severed an artery and death was from loss of blood, several transfusions failing to save him.

In a deathbed statement at the hospital, Ingalls said he was cutting limes when the knife slipped and entered his thigh.

Seen today at Charles st. jail by a Boston Evening American reporter, Mrs. Ingalls gave a different version. She collapsed on learning of her husband's death.

Mrs. Ingalls said she was carrying the knife on the way to cut some ham when she tripped and fell. The knife struck her husband, who had risen in an attempt to break her fall.

Her husband, she declared, had been simply trying to protect her in telling his story of the limes.

BRAIN TRUST TARGET OF ELY FIRE

Business Confidence in "Professors" Is Lacking, He Says

Special Dispatch.

New York, May 3—A thrust at the President's "brain trust" was made by Governor Ely of Massachusetts today when he declared in a speech before the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York that American business will "place no confidence in a total professorial commission."

Another highlight was his statement that he does not seek the immediate suspension of the codes, but the promise of their suspension.

Mention of the "brain trust" came during the governor's discussion of needed changes in the barriers against trade.

"I understand that the President is asking that the power to arrange these changes be vested in him. It is a dangerous power, but it may be a necessary one.

"The exercise of such authority means the delegation of it to his spokesmen.

"Were these commissions leavened by the presense of practical men, I should think the welfare of the nation demanded such action.

"But American business will place no confidence in a total professorial commission.

He took issue with several opinions of Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, expressed during recent speeches

PRESIDENT HAS NEW TAX BILL

By Associated Press.

Washington, May 3—The Senate today completed congressional action on the $417,000,000 tax bill by eliminating the 10 per cent emergency super-income tax for next year proposed by Senator Couzens (R.) of Michigan.

The conference report was adopted without a record vote, and then also without a rollcall the Senate receded on the proposed 10 per cent levy on income taxes which the House had turned down by a big majority.

The measure sent to the White House goes a long way toward bolstering the budget and helping to pay the cost of the recovery program, but most of the new revenue will not start coming in until 1935 when a majority of the new taxes are effective.

Make Reflation Work!

INSTEAD of dodging behind shoddy parliamentary tricks, the responsible leadership in Congress should meet squarely the issue raised in the McLeod bank liquidation bill.

The principle involved is simple and direct.

There is no need to complicate the money question.

Money is a tool, not a cureall.

Its function is to lubricate the economic machinery whereby the vast social classes—farmers, industrial workers, and the vast service groups—can give employment to one another.

Mere manipulation of the quantity of money potentially available is not enough.

This type of approach to reflation has resulted in the mere piling up to an unprecedented extent of unused, excess reserves belonging to member banks.

Excess reserves represent unemployed funds, and idle money is no more productive than labor without employment.

THE special merit of the McLeod bill lies in the fact that it offers a practical mechanism for putting funds into the hands of those who will use

FIND TWO DEAD NEAR AUTO

By Associated Press

Sebago Lake, Me., May 3—Two men found dead on the roadside near an auto, its motor idling, prompted a hurry call today for county officials.

The men were identified as Benjamin White, 45, father of five children, and Charles Dunn.

James Rand, a motorist, chanced upon the bodies. White's body was found lying face downward, while that of Dunn was face upward. White's auto, with motor running, was nearby, adding to the mystery.

TANNER STRIKE ENDS FOR 7000

The strike of 7000 leather workers in Lynn, Salem, Peabody, Danvers and Woburn was brought to an end today. Workers will return to their benches in a majority of the tanneries tomorrow morning.

The strike ended when members of the Massachusetts Leather Manufacturers Association, in a meeting held in Salem, agreed to accept the recommendation of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration to negotiate for a working agreement with the workers.

The officials of the National Leather Workers' Union, the organization that called the strike, had agreed to this provision yesterday.

The agreement of the manufacturers to carry on negotiations with the workers was made after the strikers' representatives had agreed to withdaw their demand for a 25 per cent wage increase.

The union officials had also promised 400 strikers to return to their work this afternoon to prevent the destruction of $100,000 worth of hides which have been laying in tanning vats since the strike was declared.

First property damage in the strike was reported in Peabody today.

Nathan Brezner, owner of the Brezner tannery, told police that belts, pulley and other tanning machinery had been damaged to the extent of $[illegible] during the night.

LEONARD BACKS CITY HALL AXE

Economy at City Hall and a curtailment of municipal services will be the aim of Atty. Joseph J. Leonard as chairman of the Finance Commission, he revealed today at a luncheon of the Building Owners and Managers Association of the Boston Real Estate Exchange.

Declaring significantly that "some of my predecessors in office have spent more time in exposing than in recommending," Chairman Leonard admitted that these are functions of the commission but that he believes more in recommending changes for the city's good.

"The Finance Commission," he said, "already has offered constructive assistance to Mayor Mansfield. I join heartily. This does not mean that I will endeavor to lead the Finance Commission to support blindly the mayor and the city council.

"I believe that the real estate taxpayers' burden is too heavy, but I do not believe the only way to lighten that burden is to find other sources of revenue.

"Traffic tunnels, subways, intermediate highways, achitectural monuments, beautiful park landscapes, magnificent beaches are fine things for the city to own, if its people can afford them, but the present is not a time to advocate any more of these.

"It is apparent to me, as to most of you, that some unicipal services must be curtailed if the city is to avoid the financial embarrassment that other large cities have faced."

CANNON WINS CHURCH VOTE

By Associated Press

Jackson, Miss., May 3—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., the militant dry crusader of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, today won his preliminary fight for continuance in office as bishop when a test vote in the quadrennial general conference ordered his name added to the list of bishops recommended for effective reassignment.

Dedham Courthouse, May 3—Abe Faber resented Murton Millen's marriage to Norma and viewed his own prospective wedding to Rose Knellar as only a good excuse for leaving home.

Through the mute testimony of a truth-detecting machine, relayed through a woman psychiatrist, these points went into the record today at trial of Faber and Murton and Irving Millen for murder as the defense continued its battle to exclude state evidence by showing Faber insane.

Faber's friendship with Murt Millen was described by Dr. Evelyn G. Mitchell, defense alienist.

The doctor said, "I asked him what he thought about Murt's marriage and he replied, 'I didn't want anyone breaking us up.'"

Faber Waits Call To Be Court Exhibit

During a lull in the questioning, Atty. Scharton told the Boston Evening American that the testimony of Dr. Mitchell was designed to lay the basis for a defense along the lines used in the famous Leopold-Loeb case in Chicago several years ago.

Of Faber's supposed romance with Miss Knellar, whom he was to have married next month, Dr. Mitchell said:

"Abe said his chief objective in

ROOSEVELT PUSHES NEW PROGRAM TO AID BUSINESS

BARRIERS TO LONG-TERM FINANCING TO BE LIFTED

Administration Seeks Control of Tariff to Spur Export and Plant Volume

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Washington, May 3—The Roosevelt administration at this juncture is emphasizing a positive program to aid business and employment. It believes that when Congress adjourns within the next few weeks, the basis will have been laid for substantial economic improvement this summer, and later in the year.

In connection with the recent weakness in commodity prices, sources close to the top recognize that quotations cannot continuously move upward, and welcome a reaction now, when farmers are not moving crops to market, rather than in August and September.

As part of the "help business" plan, the administration is behind the plan to insert in the Senate version of the Stock Exchange bill amendments to the Federal Security Act, which will remove the barriers to new long-term corporate financing.

One of the amendments, which has received a sympathetic hearing at the White House, would emulate the provision in the British companies act to penalize those who bring strike suits against corporations and financiers, in case they fail to prove their contentions.

Another deals with restricting the liabilities of bankers to the actual amount underwritten. High executive officers of the government think the opposition to the law has been fomented by lawyers, but to foster business improvement they are eager to put through the program of liberalizing amendments.

Moreover, in order to raise business volume, the Roosevelt administration is eager to put through the reciprocal tariff bill. The President, it is understood, believes there are opportunities to expand total trade by dealing with specific situations, rather than with grandiose, theoretical conceptions. To facilitate the passage of the measure, the White House has consented to inserting in the law provisions for hearings in advance of tariff changes.

POWER TO PRESIDENT

The bill gives the President the right to raise or lower tariff rates to the extent of 50 per cent. Contrary to the impression the power would be used exclusively to lower tariffs, it is known that the right to raise rates would also be availed of.

Japan, for example, is flooding the western hemisphere with merchandise at prices which are vastly below the competitive world level. This reflects not only the fact that girl factory workers are engaged in dormitories at five cents a day, plus maintenance and entertainment, but also, it is believed, the fact that the Japanese government may be secretly subsidizing exports.

The inducement to the government apparently is to accumulate balances in London, New York and elsewhere, which may be used for

Gilbert and Virginia Still Speak---On Phone---Despite Divorce Suit

'Perfect Lover' of Screen Is Too Violent, Ex-Follies Star Says As Love Hits Rocks

VIRGINIA BRUCE

By International News Service.

Hollywood, May 3—On the creen John Gilbert was a "perfect lover."

But as a husband, four broken marriages testified today to the actor's difficulties in his domestic life.

Asserting he was "violent and abusive," Virginia Bruce, former Follies girl and his fourth wife, today had on file a suit for divorce.

But they are not quarreling, her attorney insists.

"They will talk to each other—on the phone," he said.

Peyton H. Moore, attorney for the actor, said he did not expect any trouble.

"I do not expect any sensational case or contest," he said, providing no charges are made that make it necessary to defend my client."

It was reported a property settlement had been reached providing more than $50,000 for the former Follies star plus $400 a month for three years for her maintenance.

Gilbert could not be reached for a statement.

The couple separated some time ago on a "trial" plan and at that time, it was predicted that their romance would end in the divorce court.

Gilbert has been successively divorced from Olivia Burwell, Leatrice Joy and Ina Claire.

Gilbert's marriage to Miss Burwell occurred before he launched his movie career. Gilbert and Miss Joy were married as the path to cinema fame and riches began to smooth out for the tall, dark actor. They parted the "best of friends."

His marriage to Ina Claire came when he was the hero of countless young movie fans. In little more than a year they parted, also the "best of friends."

Gilbert and Miss Bruce were married Aug 10, 1932. At that time Miss Bruce was starting on what promised to be a good career of her own in the movies, but she announced that she wanted a husband, a home and children more than anything else in the world, so she gave up acting.

Their baby was born nine months ago.

They separated — "the best of friends."

STRAWN LASHES NEW DEAL AS EXPERIMENT

Chicago Lawyer Calls on the U. S. to Balance Its Budget

By International News Service

Washington, May 3—In a speech severely lashing some of the salient features in the new deal, Silas H. Strawn, Chicago lawyer, asserted today public confidence and normal business operations will not be restored until the government quits "experimenting," balances its budget and restores the stability of government "in accordance with the principles laid down by its founders."

Speaking his convictions before the U. S. Chamber of Commerce convention, he said renewed activity in the securities market depends, among other things, on "a definite announcement by the President that the emergency is over and that there will be no more requests for emergency legislation and no more tinkering with the dollar."

He urged revision of the 1933 securities act to permit the marketing of long-term securities and thereby revive the capital goods industries and enactment of a stock market regulatory bill "which shall not vest the management of the financial affairs of the issues of securities in a governmental agency."

"Economically and financially, we seem to be drifting about on an uncharted sea hoping that some favorable wind may spring up to carry us safely into port," he said.

ARABIA'S RULER CRUSHES FOES

By Associated Press

London, May 3—Ibn Saud, ruler of Saudi Arabia, was reported today to have crushed the ancient Kinton of Yemen, captured Hodeidah, and sunk armed ships in Hodeihan harbor with his modernized army artillery.

The Iman of Yemen, ruler of the country, was reported assassinated in a revolutionary outbreak.

The British government moved rapidly to protect its nationals and British property and to prevent any organized uprising of Arabians.

Warships, including the sleep "Penzance," were dispatched to the area. H. M. S. Enterprise, a cruiser, was ordered from Mombasa, East Africa, to Aden in southwest Arabia.

The situation in Arabia was regarded with grave concern by the British government.

France and Italy, which possess colonies at the southern end of the Red Sea, also may become involved, it was said.

Official dispatches did not confirm the reports of the death of the Imam, who had ruled with absolute power for 30 years, but his overthrowing was generally conceded likely.

DILLINGER AIDS IN GUN FIGHT

Springfield, Mo., May 3 (INS)—The state highway patrol office announced today that officers caught up with the bandit trio that engaged Trooper Ben Graham in a gun battle last night, routed the two men occupants of the car and captured a woman.

The woman was not Bonnie Parker, the patrol office announcement stated. This led to the belief that the two men, who escaped, were not barrow and another member of his gang, but were Alvin Karpis and Fred Barker, associates of the Dillinger lang sought in connection with the Bremer kidnaping at St. Paul.

The auto and woman were being held at Cabool, Mo., the announcement said.

Circus Aerialist Gains After Fall

Miss Arline Larey, 27, of Holyoke, aerialist in the circus at Boston Garden, is expected to recover quickly from injuries she suffered in a fall into a net during the afternoon performance. She is under treatment at Haymarket Relief station.

Doctors said she was suffering from painful bruises resulting from her failure to make a proper landing in the net.

"Dead" Dog Bats Fly Off Nose, Eats Big Meal

By Universal Service

San Francisco, May 3—"Thirteen" batted again today at a fly that had lit on his nose.

And Dr. Robert Cornish happily marked down another entry in the careful record he's keeping of "Thirteen's" reactions.

"Thirteen" is the famous "dead dog" of the University of California, apparently brought back to life by Dr. Cornish in his revivification experiments.

The gradual improvement shown by the dog since his resuscitation in Dr. Cornish's device three weeks ago continued to be manifest today, Dr. Cornish said. From mere quivers at first, the dog has now progressed to a point where he eats liver, milk-soaked biscuit, and even stands on his front legs. His hind legs won't work yet, though. Dr. Cornish believes they will soon.

To help "Thirteen" walk again, Dr. Cornish plans to build a "creeper" after the type used for children.

Stating the dog's brain is still numb, the young doctor added that if its brain does come back, it will have no memory of the intervening period.

The entire fantastic experiment has recalled the tales of Frankenstein, the monster legends of old.

The experiment and the unavoidable publicity brought a curious and pathetic reaction. Scores of persons have written to Dr. Cornish offering to sacrifice their lives to prove that man can be resurrected from the dead.

Dr. Cornish says:

"Impossible . . . We have no way of knowing if this dog lives consciously in the world of today, or exists in a mindless world of shadow. Science deals with certainties. We shall try no human experiments whcih might leave a mindless heritage of horror for posterity."

Dr. Cornish's experiment—his life-restoring method, if you will—is a strange combination of mechanical and bio-chemical treatment. The dog is asphyxiated—his present "subject" was dead for ten minutes—and then placed in a barrel-like arrangement which is revolved at the tempo of normal heart beats to restore circulation by gravity.

Into the femoral artery there is then injected a physiological salt solution, modified with fibrinated blood and saturated with oxygen. Adrenalin and heparin are administered.

A "shot" of gum arabic is also administered to keep the heart from racing itself out when it starts beating.

By this method, respiration, heart action and all normal impulses—except mental activity—have been restored to the dead dog.

Holdup Foiled by Car Crash

An attempted holdup of Henry Fisher, of Washington st., Lynn, in Malden today, ended in an automobile crash between Fisher's machine and one operated by William Thompson, of West Foster st., Melrose, and the flight of the bandits.

According to Fisher he was driving along Charles st., and when near Main st., Malden, two men jumped on his running board and ordered him to drive towards Everett.

Fisher became so excited that he lost control of his machine and it rushed across the roadway and struck Thompson's machine.

The two bandits jumped from Fisher's car and ran down Charles st., one of them losing a .32 calibre gun in his flight. Both machines were badly damaged, but no one was injured.

U. S. Gets Franklin Composing Stick

WAGNER SURE OF NEW BILL

Washington, May 3—Senator Wagner (D., New York) said after a White House conference a revised version of his bill to establish a national labor board had been agreed upon and that he was confident of passage at this session.

Secretary Perkins and Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, who have been assisting the New York senator in reshaping the measure, also discussed it with the President. Wagner said the other salient feature of the measure—a virtual ban of company dominated unions—had been retained.

GUARD OUSTED BY GOVERNOR

Frankfort, Ky., May 3—Adj.-Gen. H. H. Denhardt assigned state troopers to guard the Executive mansion and the Capitol because Gov. Ruby Laffoon has received threatening letters, but the governor won't have them around.

Overruling the adjutant-general, the Chief Executive said:

"There are no guards around the mansion and there won't be any."

The adjutant general was forced to yield. There were no guards at the mansion last night.

"If I get a few minutes notice before anyone starts shooting," the governor said, "I'll outrun any of them in spite of my game leg."

One of the letters threatened the governor's life and a bombing of the mansion unless a pardon was issued within 10 days for Neal Bowman, Ohio fugitive charged with two Kentucky murders who is confined in the state reformatory here.

Coast Guards Row Patient 16 Miles

Vineyard Haven, May 3—August Fonseca, 23, of London st., East Boston, gave coast guardsmen a 16-mile row, getting him from the freighter Transportation to shore, after he was stricken with appendicitis.

The freighter, loaded with coal, was found from Newport news to Searsport, Me., when the youth, a mess boy, became ill. The vessel signalled the coast guard Cutter Achushnet which dispatched a row boat. Two crews shared the long pull to shore and Fonseca was rushed to the Marine Hospital.

Des Moines, Ia., May 3 (AP)—Milo Reno, president of the National Farm Holiday Association, today called Secretary Wallace "the worst enemy the farmer has ever had in an official position."

ARMY INCREASE AIM OF FRANCE

By Associated Press

Paris, May 3—France is considering lengthening military service in the face of the danger the government sees in the policies of Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany, it was learned authoritatively today.

Premier Gaston Doumergue, reliable sources said, is backing a proposal by Marshal Henri Petain, war minister, to increase by stages the 12-months' conscript service until eventually it reaches possibly two years.

The French parliament has been hostile to such a measure, but the reduction in births during the World War has resulted in diminishing the size of the army and the cabinet favors a bold action to keep government regards as full of danger.

German Ship Runs Aground in N. Y.

New York, May 3 (INS)—Dense fog blanketed New York harbor today, tying up all shipping and causing the German liner Albert Ballin, outward bound for Europe, to run aground off Sea Gate.

With 500 passengers aboard, the Ballin remained stuck in a sand bank for seven hours before the rising tide enabled her to float free and continue her voyage.

Eight Rescued as Motorship Sinks

Norfolk, Va., May 3 (AP)—The motorship Emma J. Reed was sunk in collision with the steamer City of Norfolk in a heavy fog early today off Sewalls Point bell buoy.

Capt. W. M. Haynes, master of the motorship, the six members of her crew and her one passenger, were rescued by the steamer and brought to Norfolk.

Our old friends know that somewhere in our store there are always a few suits and coats cut to bargain figures.

Indeed, in a business as large as ours, such values are bound to be, for we are constantly marking down our broken lots and slow sellers to speed 'em on their way.

This has been our policy for years. It keeps our new stock fresh and interesting.

YOUTH MUST SOLVE PROBLEMS TOO HARD FOR PARENTS

'MAKE BEST OF BAD WORLD,' IS DECISION

Learned Conferees in Boston Give Up After Study of Two Days

By PEGGY DOYLE

Well, boys and girls, it's up to you. Even experts can't help you to solve those problems that have been baffling and bewildering you.

At the conclusion of their two-day symposium on "The Problems of Youth as a Challenge to School, Church and Home," at the University Club, yesterday, they threw down the gauntlet to you. They can't help you. They don't know any of the answers.

In voices baritone and soprano they agreed unanimously that your generation is the best yet, that you have a fine intellectual background, that you can do virtually anything, that you possess limitless courage, honesty and wisdom.

WORST OLD WORLD

But, and here each speaker's voice took on a mea-culpa inflection—they realize they have failed you miserably. They have given you the worst of all possible worlds to live in and asked you to make the best of it.

Eduard C. Lindeman, professor of philosophy, New York School of Social Service, summing up the morning group discussions, indicated that youngsters who ask to learn anything definite in reply to their interminable questions are making it very, very hard for their already flustered parents. Any off-spring who inquires casually whither are we drifting is liable to get a vast group of confusing alibis from a well-intentioned parent, who really never saw the like of things as they are today.

Formerly, the struggle was for progress—up, up and up. But since things have ceased to be on the up and up, and since the great industrial leaders and most of the world's biggies are suffering from a cosmic headache, it is time, more than ever, for children to be seen and not heard.

"We simply haven't any of the answers," said Professor Lindeman. "Intellectually, we are fairly civilized but emotionally we are very primitive. We're stymied, we're frustrated. We have the facts but our emotions won't fit the facts.

"We used to believe in progress. We used to believe that we could go up and up in a steady climb of progress. But not any more.

MARCH TOWARD WAR

"We used to believe in peace. But that dream of peace is far off now and the march is not toward peace but toward war.

"All these old ideals have gone dead on us. But we still cling to them. We are motivated by negatives—fear, hatred, anger. As a means of escape, we create a rational, unreal world. We become enslaved to unreality, we are not real and we are not behaving like real people in a real world."

Upon industry, Professor Lindeman placed much of the blame for unemployment. Industry and not the taxpayers should pay for vocational training, he said, declaring that instead of spending millions of dollars to provide secondary schools "with morgues full of obsolete equipment" boys and girls should be apprenticed in factories.

Alluding to the social problems of adolescents, Professor Lindeman said that any such discussion usually evolved into a discussion of the social problems of adults.

"If there is a revolt among youth we ought to regard it as an opportunity, a challenge, not something to be put down. If we have lost their confidence, we must start all over again. We must wash out the hypocracy and conspiracy of adults. In most cases, there is no real reason why children should listen to us. Our answers are evasions and untruths."

Edith Baker Will Wed Schiff Today

New York, May 3 (AP)—Two families prominent in New York financial history were to merge today in a quiet wedding with Edith Brevoort Baker becoming the bride of John Mortimer Schiff.

Miss Baker is the daughter of George Fisher Baker, Jr., chairman of the board of the First National Bank. Schiff is the son of the late Mortimer L. Schiff, banker, and is a partner in the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

New York, May 3 (INS) — In what was described as "a serious effort to promote social consciousness among the undergraduates of Brooklyn College," two seniors will open tomorrow a booking bureau for "dates."

Regulations of the bureau provide the first "date" must be "Dutch."

Held in Knife Slaying

Mrs. Ruth Ingalls, wife of a former baseball star, who is held in Charles st. jail on a charge of murder following the death of her husband, David Ingalls, from a mysterious stab wound. Mrs. Ingalls declares that she slipped and fell, carrying the knife, and the blade entered her husband's leg. He told a different version, however, and a warrant for murder was issued this morning in the Roxbury court.

WIFE HELD IN SLAYING

Ingalls was arrested on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. She was held in $5,000 for a hearing and now is held in Charles st. jail in default of bail.

Both charges will be heard in Roxbury court on May 10.

"I was madly in love with Dave," said Mrs. Ingalls. "We never had any trouble. He was a wonderful provider and he never loafed a week in his life.

"He came home Tuesday night about 6 o'clock and we sat down to supper about 7:15. We had baked ham, potatoes, shortcake and some lime rickeys. We had two apiece, which is our custom.

"We were eating in the little dining room, and the baked ham was so good that Dave wanted more, and I got up to go into the dinette to cut some more for him.

"I had the knife in my hand and I had to go around the table to get to the dinette. I was passing around the table when I slipped, and Dave jumped up from his chair to catch me.

"We both fell, and then he suddenly said, 'Oh, my God,' and put his hand on his thigh. I saw blood and I dropped the knife. I never could stand the sight of blood and I don't know why I didn't faint then.

"He got up and went into the bathroom and I rushed in after him. He was bleeding terribly. He said, 'Something has happened, dear.'

"I ran back to the telephone and called emergency for a doctor, a hospital ambulance or a police ambulance. Then I ran next door to Mrs. Spellman and asked her to come in.

BECAME HYSTERICAL

"They tell me Dave said at the hospital that he cut himself while he was slicing limes, but that isn't so. He was just trying to keep me out of it, I guess. It happened just the way I have said.

"Dave used to play ball out West and he met Marty McManus there. They were great friends.

"I met Dave while I was working as a cashier in a restaurant where he ate. That was six years ago. We were married in New York on April 5, 1930, at the Little Church Around the Corner.

"About a year ago he went into the fixture business and we conducted the business from our own apartment.

BABY SOLVES TROUBLES FOR 'DESERTERS'

Young Southbridge Pair Back Home; All's Forgiven

Southbridge, May 3—Little Mary Sally Ann Martin couldn't realize the change, of course, but all was happiness today in her circle at Southbridge and her youthful father and mother were preparing to go through another marriage ceremony.

It was all because of Mary Sally Ann that her mother and father became entangled with the courts in New York—although, of course, the two-weeks'-old girl didn't know that, either.

Nor will the infant, when she grows up to a young lady's estate, ever know that once she was abandoned in a New York church auditorium by parents who were penniless and hungry and who hoped that through abandonment their first child would be given a good home.

That phase is over and forgotten, the relatives on both sides said today, after they had received the home-coming trio with open arms.

All has been forgiven by Patrolman Orvila Martin and his wife, parents of Maurice Martin who, with his young wife, was released in New York yesterday when the grand jury refused to indict them for child abandonment.

All has been forgiven likewise by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Monroe of Coolidge ave., parents of Mrs. Martin, who greeted the home-comers at Springfield when the train from New York came roaring into Union Station and placed them in an automobile for the ride to Southbridge.

Gramp and Grammer Monroe chuckled over the tiny mite when they saw Mary Sally Ann for the first time, and Grammer took the infant in her arms and held it throughout the automobile ride.

"Why she's a grand baby," said Mrs. Monroe happily, "just a grand baby. The stories that I opposed the match are all nonsense."

Back in Southbridge, little Mary Sally Ann was introduced, gurglingly, to her great-grandfather, Thomas N. Gilbert, 86, who had waited impatiently throughout the day for this big moment.

Maurice, 21-year-old father of Mary Sally Ann, was anxious to find a job today, and meanwhile he and Dorothy, the 20-year-old mother, were preparing to go through a second marriage ceremony, this one in the Catholic religion.

Throngs, Spellbound, See Circus Girl Hurt

Eileen Larey of Holyoke, an aerialist with the circus, plunged a distance of 35 feet from a trapeze and suffered painful injuries while hundreds in the audience looked on, spellbound. Logan's Oxen to Battle Speeders; Police Worry

What's to be done about William Logan's oxen?

That was the important question before the members of the Massachusetts State patrol attached to the Munson barracks today.

William Logan, an old settler of North Wilbraham, has been for years an opponent of speed on the State highway through his town.

He has fought for traffic lights without success. He has pleaded for an appropriation for the purchase of boulevard stop signs, with no more success.

And now he has announced that he will take matters into his own hands.

In an ultimatum handed to the town officials and the State police today, Logan declared that he will prove that motorists can be slowed down.

He announced that he has arranged to have two teams of oxen driven up and down the state highway on Saturday and Sunday, and guarantees that he will stand by his threat to slow down the motorist.

When state police officials were asked what steps they would take to prevent the resultant traffic delay, they admitted that they had no law covering the problem.

"Well, we may be able to order Logan's oxen to the side of the road and let traffic pass, but I am not sure that we even have the right to do that," said one official.

Another said: "We will wait until we get to the bridge before we cross it. Maybe it will be raining and there won't be much traffic."

3 DIE IN CRASH AT DERRY, N. H.

Derry, N. H., May 3—Two girls and a young man, all of Manchester, were killed today as their machine left the Lawrence-Manchester highway on a curve a mile south of Derry.

The dead were: Mary O'Brien, 25, of 110 Kidder st.; Miss Frances Healey, 25, of 3 Park ave., and William Paris, 21, street address not determined.

Frank Razmus, 21, also of Manchester and said by police to have been driver of the car, was only slightly hurt.

The machine apparently left the highway while rounding a curve. It jumped a roadside ditch and plowed through a wood plot before coming to rest.

CURLEY'S JOKE STIRS STATE POLITICIANS

Ex-Mayor Undecided on Governor, Senator—or Either

Former Mayor James M. Curley has not made up his mind. He was "only fooling." He has not decided as yet whether he will be a candidate for governor or for the Senate—or for either for that matter.

Mr. Curley will not have his mind made up as to his political plans until after the Democratic State Convention in Worcester in June.

Reports that the former mayor had thrown his hat into the ring as the Democratic standard bearer for governor were described today by the former mayor as a bit premature.

At the Tom Yawkey-Eddie Collins banquet last night the former mayor said:

"I want to assure the lieutenant-governor that he will have plenty of time to attend baseball games during the next two years, because in all probability I will be a candidate for governor myself."

The remarks, directed at Lieut.-Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon, were described today as just a jibe.

"He gave me the opening and I just took a little jibe at the lieutenant-governor," said the former mayor. "I have no specific plans for the future. I cannot make any definite statement about any future campaign until after the Democratic convention in Worcester in June."

FRAUD CHARGED IN BANK WRECK

By Associated Press

Washington, May 3—A report holding that the closing of the Guardian Trust Co. of Cleveland was the result of "unsound practices and mismanagement" was submitted today to the Senate banking and stock market investigating committee.

The report, submitted by Walter H. Seymour, senior examiner for the committee under Ferdinand Pecora, counsel, held that the bank was "hopelessly insolvent" in February, 1932, one year before it closed.

Seymour reported that the trust company "has never issued a statement of condition which has shown the true facts."

He directed particular criticism at what he called the company's device of "window dressing."

"This 'window dressing,'" he said, "was through the medium of repurchase agreements, kiting of checks and large temporary deposits from friendly depositors."

Make Reflation Work--Pass McLeod Banking Bill

them wisely to step up the gross volume of business and employment.

The McLeod plan would authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to pay off the victimized depositors in closed banks attached to the Federal Reserve System.

In broad terms the effect would be to restore economic balance by rehabilitating thrifty buyers, who have been shorn of their customary buying power by bank casualties, over which they had no control.

The result would be to quicken the flow of goods and services, and to generate self perpetuating forces making for a genuine revival of full employment and prosperity.

In dealing directly with the focal centers of credit, which have failed to function, the government would forthwith correct the maladjustments which block the return of good times.

In its relations with millions of bank depositors the federal government would be repairing the injury done to them because they heeded official propaganda against hoarding.

THE government would make good the promise implied in its statement that it was safe for the public to continue to have faith in its banks.

In effect, it would merely make retroactive the principle of deposit insurance, which is now applied to solvent banks.

Even if it should cost the government something to accomplish this restoration of credit and buying power, the constructive results in the direction of increasing the national income would make the expenditure well worth while.

As an alternative for extravagant outlays for made-work and for pure relief, it would represent a sound investment on the part of the federal government.

But, according to Representative McLeod's conception the government would be lending little except TIME.

Against its advances the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be secured by the assets of the closed banks and by the double liability of its stockholders.

Though such assets might prove inadequate at this time in a forced sale, Representative McLeod believes that, if the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were authorized to hold them for as long as 10 years it would realize handsomely on them by waiting for opportune occasions for gradual liquidation after prosperity has been fully restored.

THE McLeod plan would not only do justice to the bank creditors, namely, the depositors, but also to the debtors of the banks, whose obligations are held in bank portfolios.

Instead of permitting receivers to "crack down" on bank debtors and force them to pay up at any cost under subnormal business conditions, the McLeod formula would give them plenty of time and would reduce the interest rate to 4 per cent.

The McLeod bill would put teeth into the reflation movement.

The petition to bring it to a vote on May 14 should be signed.

Congressional leaders cannot continue to run away from this pivotal economic question.

The people insist that they face the issue.

Instead of soaking and harassing business Congress should speedily pass the McLeod bill and thus contribute notably to re-employment and trade expansion.

Heiress Fails in Elopement

By International News Service

Greenwich, Conn., May 3—A father reputed to have run a $500 shoestring into $20,000,000 today was confronted with the question whether he should allow his beautiful 18-year-old daughter to marry the hairdresser son of a Stamford fireman.

He is Leonard J. Martin, the father-in-law of Kaye Don, British speedboat racer.

His daughter, Sylvia B. Martin, has obtained a license to marry Robert E. Ezequelle, 25, a Greenwich hairdresser. He is the son of Stephen E. Ezequelle, Stamford fire department.

In issuing the license, Town Clerk Harold W. Allen told Miss Martin she would be unable to marry without her parents' consent because of her youth.

Miss Martin and Ezequelle met when she went to a hairdressing shop where he was employed. There followed a speedy romance.

ELY FIRES NEW CHARGES AT BRAIN TRUST

in Washington, at Hanover, N. H., and in Buffalo, N. Y.

Discussing one of Tugwell's sppeches, Gov. Ely said the professor asserted one of the purposes of the New Deal is to eliminate regimentation of the worker under the strong hand of big business and the Governor remarked that the cry of regimentation is "thrown back at the conservative elements in this country who are objecting to the processes of the NRA with the allegation that they, rather than the administration, have done the regimenting."

"This speech is by words, a denial of communism and socialism and an affirmation of democracy but it is equally a defence of the measures taken by the government, not alone as emergency measures," Gov. Ely contended.

In another speech before students of Dartmouth College, the Governor declared, Prof. Tugwell re-affirmed his belief in democracy and a continuation of the present policies of the administration.

"I believe that we may receive a new deal without such continuance," he stated.

HOPELESS AS PROHIBITION

The governor expressed the belief that the desire for wordly advantage and the selfishness and greed of the few cannot be eliminated by any dictate through government regulation any more than temperance could be accomplished by prohibition.

While suspensio nof codes now is not asked for or expected, he said, the promise of their suspension and substitution of concrete laws on uniform hours of labor, minimum wage, elimination of child labor, and temporary suspension of the anti-trust laws as to price agreements, would give business the assurance it needs and "assure the course of the nation according to the established ideal of American government."

BUSINESS DRIVE ON

payment of essential raw materials, including rubber.

Despite confusion of thought in many places, the White House has done enlightened, analytical thinking concerning foreign trade. The first point is the recognition that we are in favorable bargaining position because we are less dependent on exports than the other principal nations of the world.

COMPETITION OUT

It is definitely recognized, for example, that it is impracticable for manufacturers supporting the superior American standard of living to compete with orientals of a low living standard.

The report the President has given private assurances to delegates to the convention here of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to the effect that he would "let up" on business was made up of whole cloth, it is learned.

Before Congress adjourns the enactment of silver legislation is expected and the White House will doubtless be acquiescent if it is permissive, as expected, rather than mandatory.

It is understood, too, a strong effort will be made in the present session to anticipate the payment on the bonus certificates which mature in 1945. The opposition of the President to this is well known.

CHINESE UPSET SILVER

I learned that the Executive is not only opposed to the legislation now because of its adverse effect on the Federal Treasury, but also because he sincerely believes the beneficiaries will need the money in 1945 when they are no longer supported by the energies of youth.

The weakness in speculative prices was intensified, if not caused by the collapse in silver. The administration does not ascribe this reaction primarily to reports concerning its own opposition to mandatory silver legislation. Washington understands the weakness was largely caused by heavy, forced selling by a group of Chinese banks, which got caught in a short position on gold. They were forced to sell silver, it is understood, to [illegible] gold.

EASE UP ON BANKS

Despite the President's reported opposition to the McLeod bank payoff bill, the agitation for the measure has at least served to make the administration realize it had been ultra-conservative in making loans against the assets of closed banks. Accordingly, the order has gone out to liberalize such advances.

Moreover, a strenuous effort is being made by the administration to get bank examiners to take a less pessimistic view of bank assets, and thus encourage bankers to loosen up in their loans to customers.

However, the piling up of unprecedentedly high excess reserves in member banks of the Federal Reserve system is taken by the administration as a definite indication of the small demand for loanable funds from those of good credit standing.

TODAY

Socialists marched and made speeches as mild as any "mother's meeting." Policemen with "night clubs" prepared for heavy duty, report nothing to do, "not a single skull cracked."

With a government taking it from the prosperous and handing it to the idle, printing billions of bonds, to hand money out more rapidly for public works and relief of all kinds, little room is left for those that tell the masses:

"Arise, throw off your chains. You have nothing to lose but your poverty."

More important to real recovery and prosperity than theoretical talk is the red night sky that you may see above Cleveland for the first time in two years. It means that the blast furnaces are operating in Cleveland steel plants. That really MEANS SOMETHING. Highbrows of the brain trust point to it saying, that the red in the Cleveland sky offsets quite a number of Professor Wirts looking for a red flame in the President's Cabinet.

George F. Marsh, 29, of South Main st., Natick, was arrested at his home early today charged with assault and battery on his wife.

OVERDRAFT BY MULLONEY IS REVEALED

Testimony of John T. Morrissey vice-president and treasurer of the Federal National Bank, given at the trial of Daniel C. Mulloney in U. S. court, today, showed that the latter had overdrawn his account to the extent of $3000 on Oct. 16, 1931.

Mulloney, on trial before Judge Hugh D. McLellan and a jury, is charged in seven counts with misapplication of the funds and credits of the bank and abstraction of collateral, to the extent of $165,000.

Asst. U. S. Atty.-Gen. Irving G. McCann traced a check of Mulloney's for $5,887.50 on the Federal National Bank records, dated Oct. 16, 1931, with the initials "R.T." beside that amount. Morrisseqy said the initials meant the check was returned to the bookkeeper.

On Oct. 20, 1931, according to Morrissey's testimony, as read from the bank records, Mulloney gave a promissory note for $5,887.50.

Frequent clashes between opposing counsel over the admissibility of records resulted in Judge McLellan calling counsel to the bench for a conference.

An insight into the method of handling the suspense account" in the bookkeeping department of the Federal National Bank was revealed in testimony by Fannie Powers of Brighton, head bookkeeper at the institution until he was laid off in September, 1931.

Powers, called as a government witness to clear up an item connected with the suspense account" of the bank, testified it was a regular practice to report all doubtful items and checks to the bank officers when they were added to that account.

The witness said he generally received instructions from Vice-Pres. Morrissey as to his duties as bookkeeper, but in Morrisey's absence, he was advised by John Lawrence Fallon, who acted as auditor and comptroller of the bank.

Asked if his attention was directed on April 27, 1931, to a check made out to Daniel C. Mulloney for $6417, Powers said it had and that he consulted Fallon about it and was told not to put it on the suspense account.

Cross-examined by Marvin C. Taylor, of counsel for Mulloney, Powers said in handling checks bearing the name of Daniel C. Mulloney, he received instructions from Fallon.

BEAUTY SCOFFS AT $72,000

By Associated Press

Norma Gilcrease

Pawhuska, Okla., May 3—The marriage of Mrs. Norma Smallwood Gilcrease, the "Miss America" of 1926, and Thomas Gilcrease, wealthy oil man, was dissolved by a divorce today, but neither was satisfied with terms of the decision.

Gilcrease, who was granted the divorce on grounds of extreme cruelty and neglect, was awarded custody of their six-year-old daughter, Des Cygnes L'Amour Gilcrease, and ordered to pay his former wife $72,000 alimony and $12,500 attorney's fees.

Both the plaintiff and the defendant filed notice of appeal when the ruling of Judge Jesse Worten was handed down last night at the end of two and one-half weeks of bitter accusations.

The former beauty champion was accused of illicit relations with other men, and with conspiring with her mother, Mrs. Mahala Smallwood Dickerson to defraud Gilcrease of his property.

These New Salts Are Wonderful!

AND A MILLION FAT FOLKS CAN'T BE WRONG

When you take Kruschen Salts for a few days that old indolent armchair feeling deserts you — it doesn't matter how fat you are—the urge for activity has got you—and you're stepping out and lively.

And best of all you like this activity—you walk and enjoy it—you thought you'd never dance again but you find you're getting as spry as ever — the old tingling active feeling reaches even your feet.

Why not try a bottle of this splendid combination of six mineral salts—a bottle lasts 4 weeks and one bottle is enough to prove to you that Kruschen will make you feel younger — spryer — more energetic—you'll enjoy life — every minute of it—AND LOSE FAT.

As one stout woman wrote: "Kruschen Salts are worth their weight in gold to me."

A half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning, cut down on pastry and fatty meats — go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar, is all you need to keep healthy—keep your stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys in splendid condition—free your system from harmful toxins and acids. Your druggist sells lots of Kruschen Salts—so do good druggists everywhere.

IISS GRIFFITH IS DIVORCED

By Universal Service

Juarez, Mexico, May 3—Corinne iffith, for many years recognized one of the screen's most beauti- actresses, was divorced here, om Walter Mitchell Morosco, Jr., reen producer son of Oliver Mor- co.

The romance of the Moroscos arted and finished in Mexico. hey were married in Tiajuana in agust 1924. The divorce was ob- ined by mutual consent, accord- g to word received here, and no ounds were given as the Chihua- a law provides this is not nec- sary when both parties agree.

Flagstaff, Arizona, May 3— now storms swept over Flagstaff d blanketed this region four ches deep.

Slayer Hanged as Girls Giggle

Bristol, England, May 3 (INS)—A laughing crowd of nearly 400 persons, including a group of giggling school girls, furnished a grotesque backround for the hanging of a British murderer today.

The joyful crowd swarmed outside Horfield jail as Reginald Hinks, 32, was executed, after being convicted of what was almost the "perfect murder." Hinks was found guilty, eventually, of holding the head of his 85-year-old father-in-law in a gas oven until the old man was asphyxiated.

It was brought out at the trial that Hinks, a handsome Lothario, wanted to get control of his father-in-law's wealth, so that he might successfully carry on secret love affairs. He leaves a wife and a daughter, 6 years old.

19th Child Born

Jamestown, N. Y., May 3—Mrs. David Johnson's 19th child, a nine-pound girl, was born today.

KANE BUSINESS IN BIG GAIN

Indicative of the upward trend in business in New England, President Harry Kane of the Kane Furniture Co. revealed today that his firm, in April of this year, had a 91 per cent increase in business over the the showing for April in 1933.

"This is the greatest increase we have ever shown in the history of our business," said President Kane, "and it definitely makes us believe that good times are here to stay.

"We have shown a very pleasin increase in business for each month of this year over the same months last year, but none so great as during the month of April.

"Of course we do not believe that increases just happen. We definitely know that this came, not as a result of accident, but as a result of careful planning and an effort to run a good store."

Spelldown Final to Draw Huge Crowd

By THE SPELLING BEE EDITOR

In response to the tremendous demand for tickets for the great Metropolitan Spelling Bee at the Boston Garden on May 12, a week from Saturday, it is necessary to state that reserved seats will be provided for the teaching forces of every school involved, and that allotments of reserved seats will also be made for all Spelling Champions—District, School, or Grade.

Today certificates of merit will be mailed to all District Champions. These handsome documents record the achievements of the 59 super spellers who now remain in a contest originally engaging 100,000 pupils. Presentation of the beautiful silver medals won by the District Cchampions will be made on the platform at the Metropolitan Spelling Bee in the Boston Garden.

GOLD MEDAL FOR ONE

One of these winners of the silver medals will on May 12 receive a beautiful solid gold medal at the conclusion of the interesting educational contest which is now the absorbing subject of conversation in 300 elementary schools in Boston and 20 towns and cities within a radius of 15 miles of the city.

Every District Champion has written in reviewing with delight the things which each, as Champion, hopes to see in and near the National Capitol. Outstanding interest from the beginning has attended the opportunity of meeting the President of the United States, but there is tremendous enthusiasm on the part of all contestants anent the chance for individual observation of the Liincoln Memorial, the Capitol, the White House, the United States Mint, the home of Washington at Mount Vernon, the Smithsonian Institute and the hundred other objects of historical and educational value.

Jessie Anne Sacco, District Champion attending the Paul Revere school at Revere, gives a most interesting and novel reason for her desire to see Washington as a guest of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"Of course Washington and everything about it is tremendously interesting to any American," says Miss Sacco, "but aside from the usual items of interest to be seen there, I am most anxious to see the White House so that I may contrast its grandeur with that of the impressive old homes in New England."

Incidentally, Miss Sacco's attitude toward the great Metropolitan Spelling Bee is very interesting.

"I have enjoyed it because it has strengthened our class, grade and school loyalty," she explains. "Further, it has aroused a pride that spurred our eighth grade toward a complete mastery of every word in our spelling book from the fifth to the eighth grade. We could hardly allow a lower grade pupil to be our School Champion and so there has been industry in this subject to an unusual degree."

"With the zest and satisfaction in winning a District Championship there is a responsibility which makes one fear about capabilities of carrying on for the Home School and its surrounding district. I am studying hard and I can assure you that I will do my best."

Just as an indication of what makes Champions, in this exacting competition, the method of study of Miss Sacco is worthy of mention.

She has more than 20 books containing difficult words lists of the eligible grades and has catalogued in seven large filing compartments uncertain words or words which may require re-study.

Miss Jessie Anne Sacco of the Paul Revere School, Revere, wants to see Washington. She is eager to win for her school the great trophy which will be the permanent possession of the Home School of the Metropolitan Champion who represents Metropolitan Boston in the National Grade School Spelling Championships. More than 20,000 words are included in the ready reference system devised by Miss Sacco for her study. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Wirt May Face Slander Suit

Washington, May 3 (AP)—Miss Rose Schneiderman, member of the NRA labor advisory board, was reported unofficially today to be planning a slander suit against Dr. William A. Wirt—unless he retracted—on charges he had referred to her as "Rose of Anarchy."

She said friends had told her the remark was made in a speech at Chicago.

900 SILK MILLS TO SHUT DOWN

By Associated Press

New York, May 3—The code authority of the silk textile industry has ordered a complete suspension of production for the week of May 14-21.

Peter Van Horn, chairman of the authority, said "members of the industry were most reluctant to take this action, but could not do otherwise in the face of drastically reduced selling prices and increased operating expenses as a result of the 32 per cent increase in wages paid to labor in the silk industry" since the code became effective.

The wage increase, according to Van Horn, had amounted to 14 million dollars annually.

The curtailment will affect about 900 mills and 30,000 workers. Many of the mills are in New England.

FABER WAITS TO TELL

WOMAN DOCTOR SAYS MURTON RULED ABE

By WIN BROOKS

getting married was to get away from home."

Defense medical testimony is being taken at this time for the sole purpose of attempting to keep from the jury the statement which Faber made to State Detective Joseph L. Ferrari.

For that reason, Dr. Mitchell's testimony of her talks with Abe in the jail, including alleged admissions by Faber concerning the crime, were given to Judge Nelson P. Brown. The jury was excluded.

Faber—himself waiting to be called as an "exhibit"—sat throughout the details of his friendship for Murton with his elbow on his knee and his chin cupped in his hand, eyes closed, in the attitude of Rodin's "The Thinker."

Murton's face was drawn and there was perspiration in little beads on his forehead.

Irving sat grinning.

Some of Faber's purported admissions introduced through his own medcial expert were that he didn't feel sorry about the shootings, that Murton made the silencer for one of the pistols and that they would not have permitted Louis Berrett and Clement Molway to die for the Lynn theater murder.

Planned to Bomb Jail in Rescue

"What would you have done about the taximen, Molway and Berrett?" Dr. Mitchell said she asked Faber, and his reply she quoted was:

"First we would have written a letter, then, if that did no good, we would have bombed the jail. We could get into any jail in the country. We had perfect plans and they couldn't go wrong if we only took our time and didn't hurry."

She said Faber told her he liked Murton first "because he was a go-getter."

"I asked him," the doctor said, "if he was not surprised or shocked when Murton told him of his plans for holdups and he said, No, it seemed all right. Anything Murton wanted to do was all right to me.'"

When Abe discussed Rose Knellar, Dr. Mitchell testified he said:

"I've known Rose and we've gone together. We were engaged but I had never considered marriage with her until Murt got married. Then I thought I might as well get married too."

Reactions to Truth Finder Are Described

The time required for Dr. Mitchell's testimony indicated that the State could not possibly finish its case this week. Besides Abe himself, his father and four other witnesses are still to be called in the effort to block Detective Ferrari's testimony.

Myron S. Huckle, Technology instructor under whom Abe studied, Jacob Gordon and Leo A. Green, two of his college classmates, and Thomas J. Larbey, who lived in the Faber house, await calls to the witness stand and will finish before Judge Brown rules on the admissibility of the Faber statement for the jury's ears and the Commonwealth can proceed.

Faber's reactions to the truth detector were testified by Dr. Mitchell to have been as follows:

He signed a permit for an autopsy on his body "after electrocution" without reaction.

He discussed a possible dire happening to his fiance, Rose Knellar, without reacting emotionally.

He discussed his own possible electrocution, the possible death of his mother, possible illness of his father, without recording a single emotional tremor, Dr. Mitchell testified.

But—one time only—when asked "what if Murt is electrocuted?" he reacted, she added.

The evidence went in while Faber sat, apparently dozing in the prisoners' cage, in the attitude of Rodin's famous "The Tinker." He may have been thinking. He was due to take the stand as an "exhibit" later in the day.

Murton and Irving Millen, on trial with him for the murder of Patrolman Forbes McLeod, listened intently. Irving grinned.

Faber, it was again testified, was under the domination of Murton Millen, named in a purported confession of his brother as the "brains of the gang that robbed the Needham Trust Co. and killed two policemen."

For the Technology graduate, the young scientist in the prisoner's cage, science "came to the rescue" today as theresults of the cue" today as the results of the truth-detector or a lie-detector were permitted in evidence through the testimony of Dr. Mitchell.

The machine, recording pulse changes and emotional reaction on little white disks — much as a seismograph records the tremors of an earth shock — was not brought into court but it was used in Dedham jail with Abe as the patient in preparation for his trial.

His Reaction Records Shown to Court

The white paper discs with their red ink tracings were brought in, and each was explained by the woman doctor.

Before Dr. Mitchell resumed the stand for the afternoon session, Atty. Harvey, counsel for the Millen brothers, again filed formal motion to transfer of the trial to federal court.

The new motion was a repetition of similar motions filed for the brothers and denied by Judge Brown.

"I know of nothing in the history of the proceedings in this case or in the proceedings that have been commenced and been thus far pursued in the United States court to alter my original opinion that there is no legal reason why this case should not continue. The motion is denied," Judge Brown said.

Dr. Mitchell, a decisive type, peering over spectacles with her hair falling in bangs over her forehead, was qualified as a psychiatrist only after lengthy challenge by Dist. Atty. Dewing.

Dr. Mitchell was recalled while Faber's counsel, William R. Scharton, sought to sustain his objection, brought on grounds of insanity, to admission of his client's statement about the crime through the testimony of State Detective Joseph Ferrari.

Faber himself, his father, possibly another doctor, members of the Technology faculty and classmates there will probably also be caled, Scharton said.

Dr. Mitchell produced a chart she had made of the Faber family tree and this was tacked on the wall. It shows a "stained family" on both sides, she testified. The chart had yellow, red and black dots and as the doctor testified, using a map pointer, the picture was like a bird's eye view of a lady playing pool.

"The defendant is apparently oblivious to the circumstances," Dr. Mitchell testified.

Signs Away His Own Body Without Qualm

"I asked Faber to sign a blank permitting us to make an autopsy on him after his electrocution. This was the question to him, 'Here is a permit for an autopsy after you are electrocuted. Sign it!' There was no indication of any emotionalism on that disc.

"For the next disc I suddenly asked him, 'If your mother should have died suddenly from this strain, what would you do?' He wrote, 'I do not think that there is anything I could do about it.' The response was unemotional.

"For the next disc I asked if his father had a stroke what he would do. He wrote: 'I don't know that there is anything I could do about that.' There was no emotional reaction to this question.

"I said to him, 'Suppose you were electrocuted?' And he recorded on the disc no emotional reaction.

Murton Is Strongest Influence, She Says

"I said to him suddenly, 'Supposing something happens to Rose Knellar?' But again there was no emotional reaction recorded on the disc.

"I asked him, 'What if Murt is electrocuted?' It was the only time that there was any emotional response."

The doctor later testified regarding long talks she had with Faber about Murton.

"I believed from what I had observed that Murton Millen was a possible explanation to what had occured," she said.

Abe said he liked Murt because he was a go-getter, she said.

"I believed in him and I believe in him yet," she quoted Abe.

'I'D DO ANYTHING FOR MURTON,' DOCTOR QUOTES FABER

'HE FELT NO SORROW FOR SHOOTINGS,' SAYS WOMAN

"He Told Me All About the Plot to Bomb the Lynn Jail and Rescue the Two Taxi Drivers"

By JAMES J. SMITH

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Dedham Courthouse, May 3—Revelations of Abe Faber and his reactions in Dedham jail to the so-called truth detector; his response to tests that defense counsel hope will prove him insane, and the medical history of the man accused of murder, thrilled another crowded courtroom today.

The testimony, again before a court with jury excluded, followed a bitter—but losing struggle—by Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing to disqualify a woman physician as an expert.

Dr. Evelyn Mitchell Qualifies as Expert

Court opened at 10:42 a. m. Dr. Evelyn Mitchell was recalled to the witness stand and Dist.-Atty. Dewing continued his questioning regarding her qualifications as an expert psychiatrist.

Q—Are you a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society? A—Yes.

Q—Are you a member of the American Medical Association? A—No.

Q—Are you a member of the Massachusetts Psychiatric Association? A—No, I never applied.

Q—In Suffolk Superior Court, before Judge Williams, you testified in the case of Commonwealth vs. Swazey-Harab? A—Yes, I did.

Q—You qualified in that case as an expert in obstetrics? A—Yes.

Scharton questioned the witness on her education and training. Dr. Mitchell said she was appointed by examination as a psychiatrist for the Veterans' Bureau but the appointment was revoked when they discovered that she was a woman. After a few questions by Dist.-Atty. Dewing, Dr. Mitchell was declared by the court to be qualified as an expert.

Judge Brown told counsel the experts, if they are called again, will have to submit themselves to questioning as to their qualifications "as if this hearing had never been held."

Dr. Mitchell, under questioning by Atty. Scharton, told of her visits to the Dedham jail to question and examine Abraham Faber. She first visited him on March 31, at that time she was accompanied by five doctors. Dr. Mitchell testified she had seen Faber six times since the first visit, and made various examinations and tests.

She also testified that she had compiled a complete history of the Faber family. A chart which she had prepared to show her deductions was pinned over the charts showing the exterior of the Needham Trust.

Pulse Is Beyond Peron's Control

Dr. Mitchell traced the Faber lineage on the chart pointing out as the basis an "important deduction" that the grandfather was insane and the grandmother was an epileptic.

She similarly revealed from the basal metabolism tests that Faber showed a "slight increase in metabolism, fine tremor of hands and considerable perspiration."

Q—What other physical tests did you make? A—Also blood and spinal fluid tests—the spinal fluid test was positive.

Dr. Mitchell continued to tell of applying to Faber what Atty. Scharton has called "the truth detector."

"A person can control his face but he cannot control his pulse," the doctor explained, "Faber was apparently oblivious to all circumstances and we wanted to find out if it was true."

Dr. Mitchell then told Atty. Scharton of the disc method of ascertaining whether or not Faber was revealing the truth to them in his reactions, whatever they were.

Q.—What kind of a machine is this? A.—Well, it is a disc that has a long cord attached to it and attached on the other end to something similar to what is used around a person's arm for a blood pressure test.

Whatever response there is to a stimulation is recorded on this disc, electrically charged.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I asked the questions and with the emotional response a change of pulse can be noted on the disc.

Q.—Tell us what questions you put to him and what his answers were? A.—I asked him to write his name with his right hand, the left hand was attached to the disc. No emotional reaction was connected with that problem.

(Atty. Scharton showed the disc to Dewing, who examined it closely.)

Q.—Now tell us about the second one? A.—I asked him to sign a blank permitting us to make an autopsy on him after his electrocution. This was the question to him: "Here is a permit for an autopsy after you are electrocuted—sign it?" There was no indication of any emotionalism on that disc.

(Dewing examined the second disc.)

Didn't Care if He Were Electrocuted

Q—Tell us about the third? A—For the next disc I suddenly asked him, "If your mother should have died suddenly from this strain what would you do?" He wrote, "I don't think that there is anything I could do about it." The response was unemotional.

Q—And for the fourth? A—I asked if his father had a stroke what would he do. He wrote, "I don't know that there is anything I could do about that." There was no emotional reaction to this question.

Q—Go ahead with the fifth? A—I said to him, "Supposing you were electrocuted?" And recorded on the disc was no emotional reaction.

Q—And the sixth? A—I said to him suddenly "supposing something happens to Rose." But again there was no emotional reaction recorded on the disc.

Q—And the seventh? A—I asked him "what if Murt is electrocuted?"

Q—What was the reaction? A—It was the only time there was an emotional response.

Q—What other tests were you present at or did you make that helped you in your conclusions and what were they? A—Well, the first time I talked to him I noticed that every time Murton Millen's name was mentioned Faber flushed and blushed. It was the only time he showed any emotional reaction. When I talked to him I would hold his pulse and I noticed that it would go rapid whenever Murt's name came into the conversation. Otherwise, he was the same—unemotionally reactive.

Q—Did you talk with him of his association with Murton? A—Yes, on those two Sundays when we were alone.

Q—Tell us what questions you asked and for what purpose? A—I asked him this in order to get a general reason to this situation, inasmuch as I believed from what I had observed that Murton Millen was a possible explanation to what had occurred. And so we talked generally. He told me that "he didn't care about anyone but Murt."

Q.—Tell us more of that conversation? A.—Faber told me, "I would do anything Murt asked me to do."

"He Had no Desire for Revenge," He Said

Dr. Mitchell continued:

"I asked him to tell me more about it. When Murt asked you to go to Fitchburg, what did you think?" He answered: "I didn't think. I just went.' I asked, 'Did you feel badly about the shooting?' He said, 'The shooting seemed like a dream; it isn't real.' I asked him if he was sorry and he said, 'They say I ought to be sorry, but it doesn't seem to register.'

"I asked him, 'Don't you ever feel sorry?' and he said, 'The time I was sorry was when I threw things at my mother, but I couldn't say so.'

"'Do you like girls?' I asked. 'I never liked girls,' he said.

"'Do they like you?' 'I don't think so. They didn't seem to,' he said. 'I couldn't talk to girls like other fellows.

"'Do you have any day dreams?' and he said, 'Yes, about doing big things in a mechanical or engineering way,' and then he went on to say that he could do them if he had a big laboratory and unlimited funds. He said he dreamed about being a soldier and later about being in the air service. I asked him if he wanted to fight anyone in particular and he said no. I asked him if he wanted to fight Hitler and he said, 'I don't want to fight Hitler or anybody.'"

Dr. Mitchell then declared that she saw Faber again on April 15.

"I sad to him, 'Abe, I hear you had a bad day yesterday.' He said, 'Yes, I passed out for about half an hour when they took the blood.' He told me he had severe nose bleeds when he was a boy and that the sight of his own blood sickened him. He said he had had a few nose bleeds recently.

I asked him if he knew what was right and what was wrong. 'That's only what people say,' he said. I asked him if he thought it was wrong to steal and he said, 'That's what people say.'

"I asked him, 'Do you not feel that a man has a right to that which is his own?' He said, 'Yes, if he can protect it.' Does that apply to yourself? I asked him. He said it did. 'Even if Murt took it away?' I asked. 'He wouldn't have to take it, he could have it.' 'Anything?' I asked. 'Yes,' he answered.

When the morning recess was over Dr. Mitchell was recalled. The questions and answers that follow are those made by Dr. Mitchell and answered by Faber. Dr. Mitchell was allowed to tell a running story of her conversation with the Technology graduate.

Q—"What would you do if both you and Murton got into a jam and only one of you could get out?" A—"I guess we both go down together. That would be logical."

Q—"Were you not surprised or shocked when Murton first told you of his plans for holdups?" A—"No, it seemed all right. Anything Murton wanted to do was all right with me."

"Planned Rescue Taximen in Jail"

"But what about Rose?' A—"Yes, I have known Rose and we've gone together. We were engaged but I had never considered marriage with her until Murt got married.

Dr. Mitchel commented again:

"Abe said his chief objective in getting married was to get away from home."

The doctor continued to read from her notes:

Q—"What would you have done about the taximen—Molway and Berrett?" A—"First we would have written a letter; then if that did no good, we would have gone to the jail; we could get into any jail in the country. We had perfect plans and they couldn't go wrong, if we only took our time and didn't hurry."

Q—"Who invented the silencer?" A—"Murt."

Q—"Why didn't you patent it. You could have made a lot of money?" A—"That never occurred to me. I guess I'm not much of a business man."

Glancing up from her notes, Dr. Mitchell observed:

"No Fear of Murt, Only to Please Him"

"Returning to Rose, he said she had never been in these things and he hadn't considered what she might do when she found out. He said his father was explosive and he said he resented his mother's trying to tell him what to do and when to do it. He said he thought Rose would make a good wife and that he had never considered what he was getting her into."

Q.—"Would you go into these robberies hoping to make enough money to start a research laboratory?" A—No, I did it because Murton wanted me to do it. Whatever Murton wanted me to do was all the same to me."

Q.—"Are you afraid of him?" A.—"No, I'm not afraid of him. But it's terrible not to please him."

Q.—"What chance do you think you had at Wentworth for research work?" A.—"At first I thought it was good, but they wouldn't pay me $3 an hour. The boys there were like a lot of wild bears. Murt could have held them down."

Q.—"Would you like to get back to Tech for research some day?" A.—"Yes, when things get settled."

Dr. Mitchell then told of several physical examinations she made on Abe. She said she came to the conclusion that he was a hyperthyroid case after she found he perspired freely, that he had fine hand tremors, and that the left thyroid was larger than the right. The neurological examinations were largely negative, she testified

"I took reflexes, but got no planter reflex," she said. "The knee jerks were rather slow. The test for co-ordination gave a negative report."

Dr. Mitchell declared that as a result of her examination and the results of the laboratory tests of Faber's spinal fluid she concluded that he had inherited a disease.

"He was precocious, he had night terrors and emotional instability and a violent temper. All these were in his personal and family history," Dr. Mitchell testified.

Q—(By Scharton)—Did you take into consideration that Faber did not smoke, drink, never indulged in sports and sayed in nights. A—That all comes into the psychiatric picture.

Q—When you talked with him at the jail what was his conduct as to frankness and reliability? A—He was perfectly frank; he didn't seem to be holding anything back. He fidgetted around a little but he was perfectly frank and answered questions easily with an air of unconcern.

"Whatever affection he had seems to center around his mother. He had violent tantrums after which he could never bring himself to say he was sorry. He would have liked to play with other children but he felt he couldn't tussle with them. But his brain was developing. We find him retreating into his own self."

Court adjourned at this point for the noon recess.

'Hitler's Wife' Hanged In Dedham Jail Yard

Dedham Jail, May 3—There was a hanging at the old Dedham jail this morning.

Right out on the front lawn of the jail yard at daybreak a figure was seen swinging from the top of the flagpole.

A jail inmate, abroad early on his way to the county farm, saw the figure swinging in the breeze that came with the dawn. Startled, the inmate shouted to deputies who slumbered in their chairs in the rotunda.

There was a rush to the flagpole. The inmate hauled on the halyards and the figure flopped down to the lawn directly in front of the home of Deputy Sheriff Shedd.

On a piece of pasteboard was scrawled the verse:

"Take heed, ye Norfolk County ring
Lest ye should some day strangling swing,
As I, on this bright April morn.
Get smart, lay off, pull in thy horn."

(Signed) "MADAME HITLER."

Deputy Sheriff Shedd said the figure was made of two "teddies," one pale green with lacy frills, which made up the lower section of the effigy. The upper half was a pale pink set inverted.

The legs were made of old fashioned Winter underwear, and on the feet were a frayed pair of men's socks. The figure was stuffed with newspapers and warped into shape with rope.

On the upper half of the figure a bright red velvet chrysanthemum was pinned and beneath it the pasteboard bearing the message.

Although the verse said "April Morn" jail officials were certain that it was not on the flagpole prior to today. Deputy Shedd decided the figure was hoisted during the early morning.

Jail officials were particularly interested in the "Hitler" signature and suspected that anti-Nazis in Norfolk county might have had a hand in the hanging.

RAINEY FAVORS STEGALL PLAN

By International News Service.

Washington, May 3—Speaker Henry T. Rainey, who has been trying to block a House vote on the McLeod bank depositors' pay-off bill, today disclosed that he had approved the substitute plan of Rep. Steagall (D.) of Alabama.

"As far as I am concerned I am for it," said Rainey.

The Steagall plan enlarges authority of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to take over assets of closed banks. This plan has been declared unsatisfactory by sponsors of the McLeod bill who assert that it was brought forward to head off the 100 per cent pay-off plan, and accepted Rainey's statement of previous conferences with Steagall as confirmation of this view.

Bridgeport, Ct., May 3 (AP)—The strange death of Arthur Todd in Long Island Sound was recorded officially today as an unsolved mystery in a finding by Coronor John J. Phelan.

Truck Crushes Man

Northbridge, May 3 (AP)—Edward Bowen, 22, of Utica, N. Y., was fatally injured today when he was crushed between a heavy truck and the mill wall of the Paul Whitin Manufacturing Co.

BLANKET OF FOG DELAYS SHIPS

Boston harbor was a bedlam today with sirens, horns and whistles sounding continuously as a result of the heavy fog that has enveloped the entire New England coast, causing delay in traffic.

Inward-bound vessels, including the New York, the Gloucester and the freighter Winona County groped their way to their docks here many hours late. Several ships that were scheduled to leave port today have remained in their docks waiting for the fog to lift.

Prepares Court List

London, May 3 (INS)—The American embassy will announce within a few days the names of 16 American debutantes to be presented at the first two royal courts of the season on May 15 and 16.

NERVES BOTHER INSULL AS HE NEARS U. S.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Aboard S. S. Exilona, May 3—Drawing nearer to the United States and his Chicago trial, Samuel Insull was forced to "pull himself together" today to defeat a bad case of "nerves" which had come over him recently as the Exilona brought him close to his "Zero hour."

"I am not going to lose my nerve," the indicted Chicago utilities magnate determinedly told International News Service today in discussing the ordeal ahead of him in Chicago.

"When a man has a clear conscience, he has nothing to fear," Insull continued. "If I had not had a clear conscience I never could have stood what I already have been through."

Jurors Hike for Joy as Attaches Argue

By WILLIAM C. CONWAY
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Dedham Courthouse, May 3—With sadness in her eyes Miss E. Augusta Simpson, secretary to Dist.-Atty. Edmund R. Dewing, came to the courthouse today and announced that her pet duckling had died during the night. The pet had become a topic of conversation since she received it several days ago from Detective John Fitzsimmons of the New York police. Over-feeding was the cause of death, she announced.

Rearrangement of the seating accommodations for the press and members of the families of the prisoners is being contemplated by deputy sheriffs. The first two benches of the spectators rows were roped off today for the families. The seat situation has gotten beyond control of the sheriffs.

During the afternoon session yesterday, Hartley C. Cutler, associate counsel for Norma, was obliged to sit on the step leading to the press box. Dr. Samuel Adams, one of the defense medicos could only get a seat after Mrs. Faber left her place to go on the witness stand.

Mrs. Joseph L. Ferrari, wife of the state detective, who with Lieut. Stokes was largely responsible for the arrest of the Millens and Faber, had an unpleasant experience with one of the Deputy Sheriffs when she appeared in the court room to hear her husband testify. Mrs. Ferrari was ordered to leave her seat because she did not have a ticket. It was only after her husband came to her rescue that Deputy Sheriff Harold Capen relented.

Joseph Stokes, of Cambridge, vice-chairman of the Democratic state committee and Edward Finnegan, also of Cambridge, attended the afternoon session. Stokes was interested in hearing his brother, Lieut. John F. Stokes, testify. Both sat within the bar enclosure.

The jurors get another unexpected day off again today. They will be free to walk to their hearts' content, but they must be kept nearby so they can be called back into the courtroom at a moment's notice. The vacated jury box was taken over during the late afternoon by spectators.

MISS HEPBURN WINS DIVORCE

New York, May 3—After receiving her divorce decree in Mexico on grounds of "deep disagreement as to life" early today, Katharine Hepburn, in a swift plane hop from Florida, was due here this morning, to fulfill an "agreement" with the movies, interrupted during the last month, by her marital difficulties.

Reports from the southern state assert that she was smiling when she landed from Merida, Yucatan, but that she frowned continually when asked by reporters about her plans for the future.

A haughty stare was all reporters received when they asked her if it were true that she plans to remarry in the near future.

Beside the clause of "deep disagreement," the actress also charged her husband, Ludlow Ogden Smith, New York business man, with incompatibility. Her papers also declared that she and Smith had been separated for more than 300 days at a time. She told the court that the "condition" was resonably divorce in its name.

30-HOUR WEEK VOTE PUSHED

By International News Service

Washington, May 3—A drive to force a vote on the 30-hour week bills was opened in the House today.

Despairing of administration support for the measures, both of which have been approved by the labor committee, Rep. Zioncheck (D), of Washington, was to file a petition to bring the bill to the floor.

Backed by other supporters of the mandatory 30-hour week, Zioncheck hoped to obtain 145 signatures to each of the petitions and thus assure a vote.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and Rep. Connery (D), of Massachusetts, chairman of the House labor committee, have appealed to President Roosevelt to support the 30-hour week bill but the President is said to have opposed mandatory legislation.

SUPER AIRSHIP PLANNED BY U.S.

(Copyright, 1934, By Universal Service, Inc.)

Washington, May 3—Naval lighter-than-air engineers are working on plans for a new greatly improved dirigible, to replace the ill-fated Akron, Universal Service learned today.

The ship, which would serve as a companion craft to the U. S. S. Macon, would be the largest in the world, exceeding 7,000,000 cubic feet. A new German dirigible nearing completion will be slightly under that figure. The Akron was about 6,500,000 cubic feet.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson is expected to request an appropriation at the session of Congress beginning next January. The ship would cost about $3,000,000.

Boy Drops Dead on Birthday Eve

Funeral arrangements will be completed today for Theodore Mildram, son of Mrs. Cora Mildram, of Myrtle ave., Greenwood, who dropped dead on the eve of his 15th birthday at the Greenwood playground.

The boy, a student at Wakefield high school, had been suffering for months from heart trouble. Yesterday he is believed to have over-exerted himself while playing with his dog.

Evangelist Dies

Toronto, May 3—Dr. H. T. Crossley, once widely known for his evangelistic tours with the late Rev. John E. Hunter, is dead here at the age of 83.

SAVE WOMAN IN AMBULANCE

After long efforts, two policemen today saved the life of a Dorchester widow by artificial respiration as she was rushed to City Hospital in an ambulance.

Mrs. Catherine Moebs, 43, of Mt. Everett st., Dorcester, melancholy since the death of her husband a year ago, had turned on the gas in her apartment and lain down to die, according to police.

Twenty minutes later she was found unconscious by her mother, who summoned police, and she was removed to the hospital. The officers who saved her are Patrolmen Patrick Finnegan and DeGiacomo. The woman's name is on the danger list.

Cleveland Yellow Cabmen on Strike

Cleveland, May 3 (AP)—A strike of drivers of the Yellow Taxicab Company was called by the Taxicab Drivers' Union today. Company officials said that "a few cabs" still were operating. They were uncertain whether all of their vehicles would be withdrawn from the streets.

The strike vote followed the refusal of the company to negotiate with the union. Yellow cab officials say the union is dominated by employes of a rival cab concern, which is not affected by the strike.

Mothers' Day stamps, bearing a reproduction of Whistler's famous painting "Mother," will be placed on sale in all branches of the Boston postal district today. The day will be observed May 13, the second Sunday in May.

Postmaster William E. Hurley said he had received 3,000,000 of the special postage issue from Washington.

Lieut. Johnson of Quincy Dead

Police Lieutenant Edward Johnson, 59, of Whitwell st., Quincy, for 31 years a member of the Quincy force, died today at the Quincy City Hospital after a three weeks illness.

Two operations did not help the veteran officer and he failed to rally from the second one performed last Monday. He is survived by a wife, four daughters and two sons.

DEATH RULES IN TREASON COURT FOR NAZIS

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
By Universal Service Wireless

Berlin, May 3—A revolutionary tribunal to deal with "enemies of the state" and dispense the death sentence for treason and "illegal propaganda" was decreed by the Nazi government today.

Fashioned somewhat after Russia's similar tribunal, the new "people's court" will consist of five members appointed for five-year terms by Chancellor Hitler. From it there will be no appeal.

Eight alleged Communists were sentenced to the headsman's block in Hamburg today. Thirty-three others were imprisoned up to 15 years. They were convicted of acts of terrorism in 1932 in which several Nazis were killed.

Eighty persons were reported arrested in Bavaria and 51 alleged Communists were arrested in Mecklinburg.

The new tribunal was created by the cabinet April 24, but was announced only today. It takes from the supreme court at Leipzig jurisdiction in the trial of all persons accused of treason or treasonable activities.

The "people's court" will consist of a presiding judge, one other jurist and three members who may be laymen without legal experience or knowledge. Before it the defendant will have no free choice of counsel. He will be defended by an attorney the court approves.

Death may be imposed on those convicted of high treason, treason against the state, or selling, revealing or publishing "secrets of state." The "spreading of atrocity lies" is punishable with imprisonment.

By Associated Press

Berlin, May 3—Details of a "Jewish plot to murder Adolf Hitler" appeared today in an officially-countenanced special edition of the antisemitic weekly, "The Stormer."

Twelve pages were devoted to discussion of "Jewish ritual murder," climaxed with the allegation that world Jewry is planning "the biggest, most gruesome ritual murder against Hitler and his followers ever witnessed by the world."

As chief evidence of the asserted plot, the Stormer cited what was presented as a Jewish New Year postcard, dated 1933, which was reproduced showing a sacrificial rooster, Swasika-marked and bearing a picture of the head of Hitler.

"This demonic wish," the paper said in referring to the plan, "shall never reach fulfillment. The Jewish problem is nearing solution."

GRETA NISSEN'S GEMS STOLEN

By Associated Press

Greta Nissen

London, May 3—A well-dressed burglar robbed the home of Greta Nisset, the actress, of $5000 worth of jewels early today.

A brother, awakened by the thief, fought the intruder until he broke away and escaped as the actress shouted "Police, police!"

Miss Nissen's home is near the fashionable Park lane.

She is appearing for the first time in England in a stage show, "Why Not Tonight," at the Palace Theater.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. They should pour out thru the bladder 3 pints of fluid a day which contains 4 pounds of waste matter.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Your common sense will tell you that this is impossible. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

30-Day Diet Derby Starts With 3 Girls in Field

By Universal Service

Chicago, May 3—At the drop of a fork today in the offices of the Public Health Department, three young women started a 30-day diet derby to see if the best loser could win.

The experiment is designed to establish also the comparative merits of the three different diets.

The women are Alice Joy, 144 pounds; Deon Craddock, 140 pounds, and Felicia Terry, 165 pounds.

For two weeks Miss Joy's menu will consist of bananas and milk, six bananas and three or four glasses of milk a day. This diet was worked out by Dr. George A. Harrop, Jr.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, who is superintending the derby, is giving Miss Terry bananas, milk, some proteins, iron and roughage.

Miss Craddock is going on a diet especially worked out by Dr. Bundesen to reduce her at the rate of two pounds a week. Today she got her vitamines A, B, C and G from a menu of orange juice, vegetables, meat and milk. She gets vitamin D from a sunbath.

FAWCETT JAIL APPEAL LOST

By International News Service

Paris, May 3—Mrs. Genevieve Paddleford Fawcett, formerly of Lo Angeles and other American cities, has lost her appeal in the correctional court from a sentence of five years for passing bad checks. Her lawyer today announced that a new appeal will be taken.

Mrs. Fawcett's record includes a parole from San Quentin prison, in California.

Mother Jailed for Using Brand on Child, 7

Lakewood, N. J., May 3—The door of a cell in the county jail clanged behind Mrs. Lydia Reed, 25, of Lakewood, a divorced wife and the mother of Esta Reed, seven, who is in Paul Kimball Hospital here suffering from burns branded into her back and legs with a hot poker.

In her cell the former wife of Samuel Reed of Seaside Heights, N. J., declared she "couldn't see why all the fuss" was raised about her branding Esta. She did it to scare her child out of bad habits, she insisted.

Looking back, teachers remember that Esta was a strange child. She would come to school for days the picture of health and happiness. And then there would be days when she was white, sick and obviously frightened.

Tuesday was one of Esta's nervous days, and when her teacher asked her if she were ill the child began to cry. The teacher called Mrs. Agnes Irons, the school nurse.

Mrs. Irons took her into her room and undressed her. She found the child's back and legs a mass of criss-cross burns.

Wire Your Congressman to Sign Petition for McLeod Bill

A NEW petition, designed to defeat the quibbling and technicalities that have blocked consideration of the McLeod bank pay-off bill, is being circulated in Congress, and should have the earnest support of every citizen.

Telegraph to your representative and urge him to respond to the will of the people by becoming one of the 145 signers necessary to make this petition effective.

When 145 Congressmen sign the petition, the bill will be taken out of the rules committee and brought onto the floor of the House for a showdown.

CALL FOR THAT SHOWDOWN NOW.

BANK PAYMENT MEASURE UP TO COUNTRY

By Universal Service

Washington, May 3—The issue of the McLeod bill to pay depositors in closed National banks in full has been taken to the country.

Rep. McLeod, (R), Michigan, author of the measure, last night addressed a Pittsburgh assemblage in the first of a series of speeches, urging the people to demand that Congress enact this relief legislation.

Meanwhile signers of petitions demanding passage of the bill today reached the million mark. The House majority leadership nevertheless stolidly refused to make a move in its behalf.

The McLeod forces predict passage if the bill reaches the floor May 14. Fifty names are needed to a petition to secure a vote.

McLeod will also speak in Detroit, Boston and Atlantic City. More than 10,000,000 people would benefit, receiving over 1,515 million dollars if the bill becomes a law.

Administration forces however favor the recently drafted Steagall bill, providing partial deposit release through the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Prospects of the passage of this measure are bright, but McLeod forces declare its operations too limited.

The President has adopted an attitude of "hands off" in regard to this Steagall measure, he indicated at his press conference.

Pay Bank Depositors

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES CONGRESS:

As an important help toward national recovery, the undersigned urges passage of the McLeod Bill, now before Congress, which provides for paying in full depositors of closed banks which belonged to the Federal Reserve System.

Toward this end I urge that the RFC make loan arrangements with the closed banks.

This procedure would give positive stimulus to business by converting frozen, idle and at present useless bank deposits into immediately available purchasing power.

I urge immediate congressional action on the McLeod Bill.

OWED BY U. S., SAYS M'LEOD

By Universal Service

Pittsburgh, May 3—The moral obligation of the federal government to make good losses suffered by depositors of closed national banks was cited as a primary reason for the passage of the McLeod bill.

In a radio address Rep. McLeod (R), Michigan, author of the bank-relief measure, said:

"It has been definitely and irrefutably shown that the government through its examiners, falsified statements concerning the conditions of banks.

"The depositors had no way of knowing that government-paid examiners had been instructed by the government to not show depreciation of certain assets of these banks.

"When heavy withdrawals followed the shaking of confidence in banks, the government, through its regularly elected and appointed officials, urged the people, as a public duty, to cease hoarding. Millions heeded this plea. These deluded millions did not dream their government was urging them to place their money in banks which it knew were unsound and unsafe."

A simple remedy of this lies in immediate enactment of the McLeod bill, the Representative said, and added that the program of bank relief "should occupy the chief place in the drive for recovery."

The Washington SIDESHOW

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal [illegible] Inc.)

Washington, May 3—A singular phenomenon of today's psychology is the utter callousness of Washington to important money. Consciousness of the tremendous significance of wealth in terms of billions is conspicuous by its absence. The very men who are framing the legislation by which the gigantic expenditures of the government are financed have lost all track of what they are doing. They just let things zip!

It was in 1891 that Speaker Reed, in reply to a howl of anguish from the Democratic side of the House upon discovery that the appropriations for a single Congress, the 51st, would pass the billion dollar mark for the first time, made his historic reply, "This is a Billion Dollar Country!"

Eighteen years slipped by before America, in the 60th Congress in 1909, was staggered by the realization that the billion dollar session had come. Today, under the New Deal, this has become a 16-billion dollar country. Those are the figures of the estimated expenditures for 1934 and 1935. Appropriations are creeping up on this total. At the last session of the 73rd Congress the appropriations amounted to $4,375,000,000. All appropriations for this session total about $[illegible],000,000,000.

It should be remembered, however, that if President Roosevelt comes to Congress within the next few days for an additional $1,500,000,000, that sum will be included within the grand total of estimated expenditures for the two-year period, of some $16,000,000,000.

The truth is that these figures are so vast and intangible that the human mind in Washington has ceased trying to grasp them. They have left even the experts dazed and dizzy.

Indian Uprising

The last person who saw that grim and grizzled Indian fighter, Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, before he passed over into the happy hunting grounds at Walter Reed Hospital the other day, was his old chief, Newton D. Baker, who went out to see him. To friends later the former secretary of war told a heretofore unrecorded tale of America's last threatened Indian uprising, which Gen. Scott and a Blackfoot chief put down single-handed out in Montana, during the Wilson administration. A band of Shoshone Indians, full of fire-water had killed a white man and taken to the war path. Baker ordered Gen. Scott, then the chief of staff of the army, to go out and put down the uprising and asked him what force he would require.

"No troops," replied the veteran, who knew the Indians better than any living man. "Just let me take Spotted Bear."

So a telegram was sent to Spotted Bear, then on an Oklahoma reservation. The Blackfoot chief met Gen. Scott and Col. Michie in Montana, and they drove in a buckboard, without any soldiers, to the canyon where the Shoshones were encamped. When they reached the canyon Spotted Bear wanted to draw back but Scott insisted.

"Then if I must go," replied the Indian, "I will go if you will promise that if we take the murderer he will get a fair trial, and if we are killed you will have me buried by your side."

Gen. Scott promised. The two went down into the canyon alone, held a big pow-wow, made the Indians surrendered the renagade killer, and they came out alive. Scott and Spotted Bear took the prisoner to Salt Lake City, the case was called at once before a federal judge to whom the promise of a fair trial was explained, and the judge made the general sit beside him on the bench so that his Blackfoot friend could see justice done to the Indian, who received a life sentence.

"Fair trial!" commented Spotted Bear, and the great Shoshone was was over.

CHAPTER 28

"IF THERE'S anything in the world that Phil Veritzen eats up," Lillian said, as she wheeled my chaise longue over to the telephone, "it is to have a good looking woman ask his advice. Oh: no charge at all for the spinach," she added with a grin, as I made an involuntary [illegible] gesture of dissent.

She wrinkled her nose at me and handed me the little French telephone, while I felt a distinct chilling of my spirits at the prospect of talking to Philip Veritzen.

But when—after the usual routing through switchboard operator, office girl and confidential secretary—I finally reached the carefully guarded seclusion which is his, I found him most affable.

"You know, dear lady, that I am always at your service," he said flambuoyantly. "I can be at your hotel in an hour. Will that do?"

MADGE HAS A PREMONITION

"Of course," I said earnestly, "and thank you so much! I would not dream of bothering you, only I do need your counsel so very much."

"Please never use the word 'bother' in connection with you and me," he replied. "It is unthinkable that you could ever bother me. I'll be there in an hour. Until then, au revoir."

"You look as if you had swallowed a dill pickle," Lillian commented as I put the telephone back upon its rest. "What did he say that annexed your nanny?"

"Nothing that ought to annoy me," I said, "but he said it was unthinkable that I could ever bother him and I wanted to [illegible]"

My voice trailed off [illegible] and Lillian finished my [illegible] for me.

Dicky's knock interrupts preparation for the Veritzen interview and Madge wonders if Dickey will tell her about "Floss."

"Whether he'd be saying the same thing an hour from now? Well, it's a cinch he won't be thinking it, anyway, even if he does save his face, a la Lee Chow and his countrymen. If hate waves could kill, you'd be a 'dem'd, damp, unpleasant body' within five minutes after springing your news on him. But fortunately, we haven't progressed that far with the psychology dope, although I'm expecting every day to hear of some new invention for utilizing thoughts for both murder and salvation.

CLEARING THE DECK

"Sorry! I didn't mean to inflict a sermon to you. Let's get back to our muttons. What about it? Shall I wheel you back where you were, or will you stay here near the telephone?"

"Stay here," I decided. "There may be other [illegible] for me."

"Let us hope not," Lillian said decidedly, and I knew that she was thinking, as I was, of the disturbing call I had received from the girl who dubbed herself Floss, and asked familiarly for the "Dicky bird." But I resolutely shut all thoughts of [illegible] of Dicky's anger when Lillian and I had baited him [illegible] away from my mind [illegible] focus every faculty upon the trying interview before me.

Lillian sat down in a low chair facing my chaise longue and propping her elbows on her knees cupped her chin in her hands while her eyes stared [illegible] vacancy.

When at last she lifted her head and [illegible] at me I knew that she had [illegible] campaign [illegible] that she expected [illegible] end of it. But with [illegible] courtesy she would [illegible] opinion at every point, and would be offended if I played the [illegible] of a "yes woman" without giving her an argument if I really differed from her on any point.

"Do you think—" She began characteristically with a question—"that Noel and Mary [illegible] to be present at the [illegible] of this interview?"

"I suppose that depends upon Philip Veritzen's [illegible] doesn't it?" I countered.

"You mean his certain mood," she retorted with a grin. "Make no mistake, he'll be ready to bite chunks out of all bystanders, innocent and otherwise. But then," she reflected whimsically, "there won't be no such animal as an innocent bystander in our crowd. We're all equally guilty. But I have a hunch that [illegible] single out Mary on whom to empty the heaviest vials of his wrath."

"Then," I said demurely, as if the thought had originated with me, "it probably would be a good idea to keep Mary, and Noel also, out of his way until we have deflected his first wrath."

"That's what I think," she assented. "So when they come in, let's park them in my [illegible] until we judge it's the psychological moment for them to enter. Perhaps we'll conclude that it's better for them to keep out of the way for a day or two."

Dickey's knock put a period to her sentence, and I looked at her in sudden dismay. Had he come back in anger, or contrition, or—worst of all—indifference?

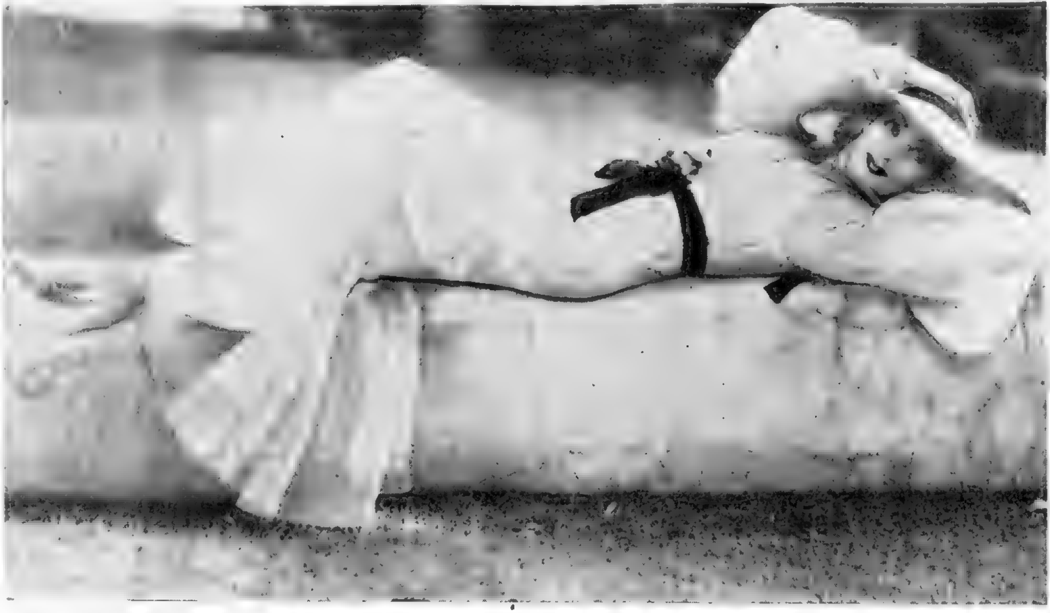
The Mode of the Moment as Shown by Well-Known Women



THIS UTTERLY FEMININE summer frock, worn by Ann Sothern, is of white and blue checked gingham. In the old-fashioned manner, the neck buttons high at the throat and the full sleeves are long. At the front of the black velvet belt is a cluster of brilliant wild flowers. With this cool dress Miss Sothern wears a broad brimmed leghorn hat, trimmed with the same black ribbon, trailing in two long, little-girl streamers. Heel-less and toe-less sandals of white linen are cool as well as charming. She describes the ensemble in her own words.

By Ann Sothern

NOW THAT I HAVE completed work on my latest picture I can turn my thoughts to my wardrobe, for late spring and summer.

Softly feminine, alluring in line and color, it is my favorite for the garden tea-party. Of light blue and white-checked organdie, the dress buttons from the waist high to the throat; the collar is daintily small.

The dress is form-fitting to just above the knee and breaks into a big circular flounce. The sleeves are immoderately full, caught tight at the wrists with narrow buttoned cuffs. The belt is of black velvet ribbon fitted at the normal waistline, fastening in front with a bow caught with a cluster of various red flowers.

My hat is a picturesque, broad-brimmed leghorn, with black velvet trim that floats in long streamers down the back.

Brilliant Bidding Must Show Strength in Honor Tricks

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

THE BRILLIANT BIDS of expert Bridge players most always have a very firm foundation in honor tricks, although occasions do arise at the Bridge table when a player must make an effort, through bidding, to give a more complete picture of his hand to his partner, even though it may involve a considerable shading from the requirements of biddability in the suit. The finely spun web of inferences exchanged in the bidding of a hand requires precision from both players, but many bids which may appear dangerous are safe if only both players really listen to their partner's bids and exercise their minds in connection with them before making another call.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass (1)
2 ♡ (2)	Pass	4 ♡ (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) So far the bidding has been exactly conventional. North holds 2½ honor-tricks and a six-card suit, East has a very valid overcall at the range of one, and South, of course, with his hand, is fully justified in making a free bid. West, however, delighted with the diamond situation and lacking both trump strength and tricks for a raise of his partner's bid, gladly passes.

(2) This is the unusual bid. North reasons that his partner's free bid shows a hand of considerable strength and that the strength may be massed enough in the heart suit as to make possible a game or at least a part-score. It would be impossible to show the hearts at any other stage of the bidding, and North feels that his heart bid is the equivalent of the impossible bid of, say, 2½ clubs. His intention is not to continue the bidding except in the unexpected event of a force from his partner.

(3) Of course, South, in making this Raise, anticipates a stronger heart suit than his partner actually has. Therefore from South's standpoint the bid for game is in no sense an overbid.

East elected to open a diamond against the game contract which was won with the King in Dummy, the Declarer discarding a spade. It was apparent that the contract would require very careful handling as well as very excellent luck if it were to be fulfilled. The second play was the lead of a small heart from Dummy, upon which North played the King. North then returned a small heart from his own hand, East's Queen winning. Inasmuch as both players followed suit, North could now see the safety of the contract if the clubs broke 2-2, as they did.

I cannot too strongly emphasize that North's bid was far from orthodox, but admittedly he had to find another bid over two diamonds. The heart suit had a great many holes in it, and every break was a lucky one—but then, the cards sometimes are that way.

Pop Concert Opener Wins High Favor

By MOSES SMITH

Spring has come. If you have followed the calendar, or observed the weather, you have been deceived by appearances. For, as every Bostonian should know, spring does not really begin until the opening of the Pops Concerts at Symphony Hall.

This fundamental truth has been established during the course of 48 years. Last night's opening of Pops' 49th season, restated an axiom in familiar terms. The hall was crowded with people, whose outward aspect was springlike, and whose inner mood was in corresponding harmony. The redecoration of the hall itself was consistent with the prevailing atmosphere.

Opening night at Pops reminds you of many things. Of the pleasure of hearing light music well played; of being permitted to eat and drink and smoke while listening; of the urbanity which allows a gentle conversation behind the screen of music without the inevitable 'shushing' which would greet such an affront to a formal winter concert.

Almost always one starts by forgetting the music and ends by listening attentively. For if you have any music in your soul you cannot help being reminded of it by an orchestra which is substantially the great Boston Symphony Orchestra, and which is led by an able conductor.

Arthus Fiedler, who has directed four previous seasons of Pops, was again on the stand last night. He had arranged a well-balanced program, which began and ended with operatic selections, contained several light and characteristic numbers, and paused to renew acquaintance with three works from the symphonic repertoire— the dance from Richard Strauss "Salome," the exciting "Saporogian Cossacks" of Gliere, and Respighi's symphonic poem, "The Pines of Rome."

During the course of the concert Mr. Fiedler was not content to wave his stick with routine precision, but sought as well to interpret the musical score, whether it was the pretentious work of Respighi or a light, flavorsome "Jazz Nocturne" of Suesse (a lady who arose from her seat on the floor several times to acknowledge the hearty applause). For the most part the musicians responded with performances bettering in quality those of previous seasons. Of all the program, Mr. Fiedler and his orchestra were probably most successful in the Gliere composition.

TONIGHT'S PROGRAM

Tonight will be "Spanish Night" at the Pops in Symphony Hall, the concert being given for the benefit of the Chirstopher Shop. Dancers upon the stage, and costumes in the auditorium will enliven the occasion. The program follows:

True Childlike Motifs Are Used

By Annice Brink

PERHAPS CHILDREN'S clothes have been dominated too long by the elders—grown-ups [illegible] that such and such a [illegible] of intricate [illegible] trimmed with elaborate [illegible] was the idea [illegible] for the little pet.

Now comes a young woman who designs expressly for a child's [illegible] its mother's, although [illegible] under the [illegible] of the motifs [illegible] of the talented four-year-old's conception of a baby chicken walking a fence rail (the [illegible] of perspective and how a chicken could [illegible] on a fence rail is part of that era when everything is possible).

Mariska Karasz is the designer's name; she is a Hungarian by birth and an American by marriage. She started as a designer of adult clothes, but in designing for her own children, she found that her favorite method of using [illegible] of design in trimming some but not all with a hint of the peasant idea, not only were the two little girls overwhelmed, but actually something new in children's clothes was created.

All [illegible] to be the favorite of Mariska Karasz. The chicken walking the fence rail, for instance, is appliqued in yellow on tangerine. It is not simply one little conventional design placed on the skirt or the middle of the bodice. Nothing quite so inane. The fence rail goes all around the very full skirt, the design filling the whole skirt from hem to high waist, and the chicken and its duplicates, almost life size, skedaddle along just under the waist line.

Sun suits for the very tiny tad poles have individual feminine ideas, when they are intended for Sister. One in bright blue has much extreme decolletage, and with it goes a speck of ruffled apron, to be tied around the waist for that indispensable feminine touch.

A "cherry" dress has colorful applique blobs with cerise centers appliqued on a deft blue silk —a dress that would stay in a child's memory book of the loveliest things that happened.

Blue cotton ball fringe dances enchantingly from the boat-collar of another frock. And there is a clever use of three different kinds of print material as trimming on a play suit, with a wiggling fish as a decoration. A crescent and star design appliqued in tiers on white organdy might almost have come from the margin decoration a little girl had made on her copy of the "Arabian Nights." All these things indicate that Mariska Karasz might well become as much of a standard of childhood as Hans Anderson or Grimm.

Lace-Edged Linen New for Blouses

WHITE HANDKERCHIEF linen trimmed in narrow lace is a new and dainty addition to the blouse mode, especially effective with dressmaker suits of navy or black.

Sometimes the neckline features a jabot frilly with rows and rows of lace. Sometimes a surplice collar, also lace trimmed, supplies the finishing touch. And then there are round-necked collarless blouses with the front worked in fine tucks, insertion and lace.

TAFFETA in dark grounds with white crossbar or pin dot are new notes in the blouse symphony, and sheer dimities and dotted Swisses hold their own.

Shirting silks, candy striped seersuckers and the new silk seersuckers also are good, all in the classic shirtwaist style.

BEAUTY OF NEW COIFFURE DEPENDS ON SOFT SHEEN IN HAIR

Often Tresses Are Starved for Oil, and Show It in Their Lack of Lustre

HOW OFTEN DID we hear the expression "streamline" and "windswept" last month? Grand words, to be sure, but they outsold themselves. Not to be outdone, however, hair stylists have pulled a new trick from their ingenous May bag. It's called the serpentine coiffure and it's as sleek and shining as a modernistic black mirror.

Those flat top little Breton sailors and huge, shallow, crowned hats brought about this new style. It moulds your head, actually, into something a little nearer to the heart's desire. However, with crowns threatening to go thinner by the hour, it's easy to see why hair must be lustrous and sleek.

Your Beauty Problems Solved

Egg Shampoo

Question: Will you please tell me how to give an egg shampoo, and how to make a shampoo out of a bar of soap?

R. L., Waltham.

Answer: Give an egg shampoo just as you give any shampoo, using the yolk of an egg instead of soap. Wet the hair in warm water, then massage the yolk well into the scalp. Leave on a few moments then wash the yolk out, using several waters. No soap or shampoo preparation is necessary. Rinse well in warm water then cool water, and dry in sun and air. This shampoo is especially nice for blonde hair.

To make shampoo from soap; shave the soap fine, add water and cook to a jelly. You can then place the preparation in a covered jar to use when wanted.

Dandruff Treatment

Question: I am troubled by dandruff. Would you advise cutting my long hair so that it can be treated? Is it possible that dandruff is caused by long hair?—F. L., Somerville.

Answer: I hardly believe long hair will cause dandruff, nor that it will be necessary to cut your hair in order to treat it, although it is easier to treat short hair.

Crude oil for the hair and scalp followed by a tar soap shampoo is excellent for the hair and also tends to correct dandruff. Massage it well into the scalp and leave on as long as convenient. Then wash in several waters, using the tar soap shampoo, rinse well and dry.

Shiny Face

Question: Is there anything that can be done to rid the face of "shine" after washing? I dislike using powder. What general procedure should one follow to eliminate blemishes from the skin?

E. L., Dedham.

[illegible] It is quite natural for a face to appear shiny after washing, and there is no reason why you should not use a little powder. A very little cream smoothed well into the skin, followed by a pure powder, will improve its appearance and is harmless.

If you will take the best of care of your skin, paying special attention to diet, exercise and fresh air, the blemishes, doubtless, will gradually disappear.

Superfluous Hair

Question: Can you describe a bleaching process for superfluous hair? I understand that the use of ammonia is necessary. Is there any specific type that should be used? P. S. T., Lexington.

Answer: You can use either household or toilet ammonia for the bleaching solution. The proportions are one-half teaspoonful ammonia to three tablespoonfuls peroxide. Apply to the superfluous hair with a fine brush or piece of absorbent cotton. Use as often as convenient. If your skin is sensitive, apply a little cream afterwards. This method will not, of course, destroy the roots of the hair. It will tend to deaden the growth and lighten the color so that it will be much less noticeable.

Keeping Hair Light

Question: My hair, which is naturally ash blond, is getting darker. Can you suggest a home remedy that will restore it to its original color?

R. G. J., Peabody.

Answer: Lemon juice will keep your hair light and bring out the blonde lights. Use the juice of one lemon in the final rinsing water. A camomile rinse is liked by many people.

The formula: Two ounces of camomile flowers steeped in a pint of boiling water. And don't neglect brushing your hair. It will bring out the lights and luster as nothing else will.

Superfluous Hair

Question: Is there any definite method of removing superfluous hair? My face and arms are covered by a dark growth. Which is the better rouge for a sensitive skin—liquid or paste?

H. W., Worcester.

Answer: Superfluous hair can be removed safely only by electrolysis, and results are usually permanent. It is the only known method of destroying the roots of the hair so they will not grow again. Be sure, however, to choose an operator who is reliable and skillful in this line of work.

A paste rouge is better for a sensitive skin since it's less drying. It's a bit more trouble to apply, but practice until you are able to use it skillfully—I know you will like the effect.

Now, don't get the idea that straight hair is coming back. The serpentine isn't as revolutionary as that. But your hair must scintillate with health and well-being in order to have this coiffure appear at its best.

IMPORTANT DETAILS

Keeping the hair lovely is one of the most important details of the fastidious girl's daily beauty program. There is the weekly shampoo which is of vital importance and the equally important application of oil to keep the tresses soft and shining.

There is altogether too much dried-up hair that could be lovely with a touch of an oil preparation. To get the hair and scalp in good condition you have got to use oil. It's indispensable.

I often wonder why more girls haven't caught on to this simple beautifier. It is so inexpensive and beneficial. First the hair is parted, then, after the scalp has been covered with a light application of oil, it should be given a vigorous three-minute massage.

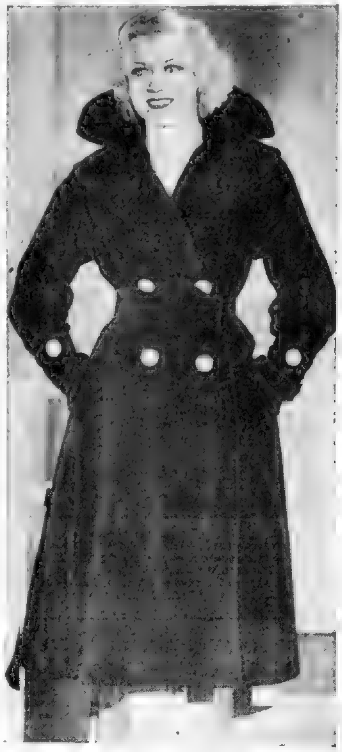
You'll be pleased to know, I'm sure, that if you apply this oil properly you need have no fear of giving your hair an unkempt appearance. Just remember that all the powder and rouge and eye shadow will not make you look half as glamorous as a head of gorgeous, healthy hair.

A WEEKLY SHAMPOO

The fastidious woman who prides herself on all the details of good grooming will always keep a small bottle of this oil on her bath cabinet shelf.

And while we're on the subject of hair, I might say something about shampoos. Once a week is NOT too much, believe me. Especially if your scalp is inclined towards dandruff. Some women think it is a fine idea to rub a little alcohol into the scalp just before washing. If your hair is very dry, use a little castor oil with it. Just dissolve three tablespoons of castor oil in a pint of good alcohol and shake it thoroughly. The alcohol will seep into the scalp and the oil will prevent any dryness. Telephone to Juliet Shelby, Beauty Editor, LIB. 4000, if you wish to know the name of the oil to rub into the scalp, and where it may be purchased in the city. If you prefer writing for this information, send along a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your inquiry.

Trench-Coat Goes Formal



Nothing—not even the Italian officers' cape—has ever equalled in swagger and swank the trench coat with great lapels and a belt that is purposely tied so tightly that the skirt seems to balloon in contrast. In velvet with gleaming pearl buttons, as Ginger Rogers wears it, it is quite the most unsophisticated (and is that a virtue these days?) and smartest thing for young summer evenings and young things in general. A Boston shop has this velvet evening trench-coat. For further information, phone Annice Brink, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Stone in Kidney Always Distressing Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

I can think of no affliction more painful and more distressing than stone in the kidney. If you have ever witnessed the agony of a victim of this disorder in an acute attack, you will agree with me that it is terribly painful and alarming.

Stone in the kidney is a trouble that has afflicted mankind since prehistoric days. Descriptions of the classical symptoms of this disorder are found in the writings of ancient physicians, such as Hippocrates, Galen and Celsus. These learned men wrote about it but could offer no cure and little help.

Modern science has perfected a surgical method of treatment for this painful disorder. Within the past quarter of a century, this operation has been revised and it is no longer considered as a serious and dreaded ordeal. With the discovery of the X-ray, still improved to such an extent that greater advances were made in the study of this ailment.

Contrary to a popular notion stone in the kidney cannot be dissolved or destroyed by medicine or diet. Many afflicted with stone avoid medical advice for they fear an operation. This is a foolish attitude.

In the long run they resort to surgery because they can no longer stand the pain. Unfortunately, it may then be too late to save the diseased kidney. But early recognition and proper attention then will save a great deal of unnecessary suffering.

When kidney stone is allowed to remain for an indefinite time inflammation and infection may occur. The stone may block up the passage and lead to a damming back of the urine. "Hydronephrosis" is the big name given to this complication of kidney stone. As you see it is really an enlargement of the kidney due to obstruction and retention of fluid in the damaged organ.

"Pyonephrosis" is another complication of neglected stone of the kidney. In this condition, the tissues became inflamed and laden with pus. Unless surgery is immediately resorted to, it may be necessary to remove the diseased and damaged organ.

The sufferer from kidney stone should avoid all fried and greasy foods, salt, peppers, spices and condiments. Drinking glass of water every hour. Avoid any tendency towards faulty bowel elimination.

Chickie's Daughter

By Elenore Meherin

CHAPTER 73

The firelight made her face ghostly and her hair, which she had shaken out to dry, had an unnatural shine.

Dale Owens gazed at her. She fitted in well with the storm. He stirred up the fire and offered her a cigarette.

"Thanks for finding me—how did it happen?"

"You're just across from my cabin. I was on the porch watching the storm. I saw your fire and guessed some hiker was in trouble. Aren't you very young to be tramping the mountains so much alone?"

"I'm not young and I like being alone."

Dale Owens laughed. "Neither statement is true. But you make a nice picture swinging along in your solitary way."

"Like Lucy Gray across the lonely wild."

He caught the hungry note in her voice and wondered about it.

Pippin held her sweater before the fire.

"My mother will be so awfully worried. Is there a short cut to the trail?"

"No—but it's not so far—two miles to your cabin."

PRETTY ROUGH GOING

He put out the fire. Pippin looked into the thick, impenetrable dark.

"You can't reach the trail from here."

"I got up here, didn't I? I'm an Indian trailer. Follow closely and don't be afraid."

He took Pippin's hand, drew it through his arm. They started down the rocky, uneven slope.

"I'm sorry," said Dale, "pretty rough going, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is, but hurry, anyway. I want to get home."

They talked in brief snatches, feeling their way cautiously between crags. Presently they were on the trail.

Pippin gave a soft exultant laugh. "I love to see the sky all swept about, the stars lost and a cold bright moon like that come sailing high."

He said puzzled: "You should like better gold and streaming gentian on the water. Must you always hike alone?"

"[illegible] My brother is often with [illegible]. Sometimes my mother goes."

"You say you've been to Rainbow, but there's a little lake entirely hidden a few miles distant. I doubt if anyone has ever found it. It's very wonderful. I took Kate Stone to see it the other morning."

Pippin said on a sigh: "I like Kate Stone!"

"Yes. Isn't she the quaint, picturesque dynamo?"

She answered, eager: "It must be wonderful to be like Kate."

"What do you mean?"

"She seems so free. All done with storms and tumult. Everybody loves her."

HOW THEY MET

He said absently and his voice stirred along her nerves: "I wonder if it's well to be past the storms?"

This was the way Pippin met Dale Owens.

He caught up with her several times on the trails. When she was in swimming, his boat passed. He waved.

One day she was going to Rainbow. He swung along at her side.

"Do you want to see the little lake I told you of?"

"Yes. I'm going that way."

In half an hour they stood before a small, dream-like pool, completely encircled by tall, desolate pines, but the miniature lake was a-bloom with lilies.

"I wish my mother could see this," she said excitedly. "But it's a little far for her."

"You can bring her a few . . the blue and pink. They're different."

Pippin leaned against a great tree and gazed at the loveliness. He stood silent and watched her. Then he came up and took her hand.

She said happily: "I am glad you showed me this!" and raised glowing eyes to his.

He looked into them startled. "Well—I'm glad too!"

Shortly after this he showed her a sketch of the lotus-lake. Standing against the tall pine was a girl with vivid hair and blue deeply-burning eyes. Pippin recognized herself. She reddened because of the stormy sadness revealed in her face.

"Don't you like yourself?"

"I don't quite admire the girl's angry look. The rest of the picture is lovely. Did you do it? Oh, you're an artist? And you've been coming up here for years? It's odd we didn't meet sooner."

TELLS OF SKETCHES

"No, it isn't. I'm not of your generation. Besides, I've only been on this lake two years and I'm scarcely an artist. Just a magazine illustrator. I've done quite a few sketches of you. I wish I could use them."

She gave a quick, excited laugh and said, greatly intrigued: "Why can't you? It's extremely flattering."

She was glad of his company, glad when he joined her on the trails.

Sometimes Kate Stone was with him. They were the gayest of comrades though Kate was surely 50 and an incorrigible spinster. Dale was 34 and warmly attractive.

One day the three of them stopped off at his cabin. He made tea and thin cheese toast for them.

He told interesting stories of his years in Paris, and later years when he worked for a syndicate in New York. Now he was established and led a free life.

Pippin sat on a cushion, her hands clasped at her knees. She wore hiking trousers and a blue shirt open at the throat.

He got out a sketch book and very quickly made a red crayon. Pippin was bursting with eagerness to see the work. Then she was delighted.

"You like it? All right, it's yours."

"Maybe you want it?" she said to Kate Stone.

"No — he always makes me homelier than I am. He calls it giving me character. I have enough of that by nature and would prefer a little beauty."

He walked home with Pippin. She said, wistful: "It must be wonderful to know such gifted delightful people and to be always doing odd, unusual things."

"You mean it's great to be a little crazy? I think so, too. You're not entirely sane, I hope?"

"Oh, yes, I am!"

"You must get over it! But then it isn't true or you wouldn't be wandering about so much alone. That's rather mad. Don't you ever go to dances in the evenings? There are good ones at the Tavern."

"A million miles away! But two years ago we used to drive pell-mell to Placerville on Saturday nights—50 miles each way over a curved mountain road."

"What do you do this year?"

"I usually read. Sometimes I take out the boat or I sit under that lone tree on our crag and watch the colors changing in the sky and water. It's never the same."

"Will you be doing that tonight?"

She said, flippant: "Not till Tuesday of next week!"

"I'll be there to watch the colors with you!"

Her heart flushed as she walked up the massive granite bluff and leaned against the tree that Tuesday night. She waited.

MISS CATHERINE RICHARDSON WILL ENTERTAIN AT DINNER

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

FISH STORIES! . . . READ IN HASTE and relent at leisure! The Lowell House dance on May 11 is promising the biggest orchestra ever seen at a Harvard House dance . . . no one else but Ozzie N[illegible]n from Noo York with his crooning band and a real, live radio crooner thrown in . . . maybe thrown out, who can tell? The much press-agented blonde Harriet Hilliard, is expected [illegible] much is always expected of blondes. The Harvard youths are expected to battle for her smiles . . . what a battle that will be—Ho! Ho! We hope pretty Miss Crooner won't miss her train back to Noo York waiting for that battle to commence . . . one if by land and two if by sea and she on the midnight train will be!

JANE SMITH

That man of Steele is chairman of the entertainment committee—let us hope he will not lose his temper over all this. Ably assisted by Arthur Willis, Jr., George Skinner, David Gates, Edward Lee, Fred Bertolet, Wallie Pierce, Phil Tucker, Charlie Houston, Ben Prouty, William Locke, Charles Sallo, Hunter Damon, Donald Bates, George Lauriat, Theodore Sheafe, Richard Boyer and Robert Creel he will have just nothing to do except to see that the glamorous debs have a nice time . . .

There will be a dinner for the house members and guests who will attend . . . if we are not correct about this, Mr. Steele, please correct us . . . and no doubt Jane Smith, Jean Fuller, Betty Scott (all the way from Northampton), Milda Allen, Edith Parkhurst, Eleanor Park and other Fair Things will help to spread the fun . .

The patrons are the same as last year, no doubt . . . and will be for years to come . . . we hope. Professor and Mrs. Julian Coolidge, Professor and Mrs. James Munn, Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie Steele, Dean and Mrs. Delmar Leighton, Dr. and Mrs. Archibald Davison and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Willis.

Extravagant futuristic decorations are mentioned . . . why mention it. Let us have something a surprise . . . Let's not dress is also mentioned . . . That would be a surprise.

Lydia Lovering to Wed June 30

AN IMPORTANT CATCH IN THE SOCIAL sea will be married on June 30 . . . Lydia Lovering and David Turner Dana, Jr., of Lennox, will pledge their vows at the home of Miss Lovering's aunt, Mrs. Frederic M. Burnham, in Bolton, Massachusetts . . . The Richard Lovering home of the bride-to-be is in Hoffman, N. C., but the family are coming north the end of this month to make arrangements for the wedding . . . Miss Lovering has many family connections hereabouts; she is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amory Eliot of Manchester-by-the-Sea. A debutante of the season 1930-31 in Boston, she was elected to the Vincent Club and Junior League.

Like a spring freshet, the 1934-35 debutante season is upon us . . . already one eager bud is bursting to come out. On Friday afternoon, Miss Martha Proctor, daughter of Mr. James Proctor of 273 Commonwealth avenue and Ipswich, will be presented at a tea. Her sister, Miss Esther Proctor, will receive with her sister and her father and assisting at the tea tables will be two cousins, Misses Emily Rice and Edith Carter, and Miss Natalie Folsom. Other pourers will be Mary Pentecost, Cornelia Pentecost, Rosamond Lockwood, Patricia Bird, Gwendolyn Livermore, Mary Elizabeth Sears and Jeannie Paine.

Later in the season, a large house dance will be given for Miss Proctor at Mostly Hall in Ipswich, her father's country estate completely surrounded by relatives.

Shawl Pageant Rehearsal Is Held

THE ballroom of the Myles Standish Hotel was a beehive of activity yesterday afternoon as Theodosia Clark put the cast for the pageant, "The Romance of the Shawl," through their paces in preparation for the production of this unique event on May 10 at the Repertory Theater for the benefit of the Emergency Relief Campaign.

The gilded walls of the room echoed the one, two three and four of the coach as the models danced and swayed across the stage in the most artistic fashion to act out in pantomime the score which was being read by one of the committee members.

A group of girls from the Choate School in Brookline have been detailed to appear in early pioneer shawls in the American episode, and Mr Thomas Wareham of M. I. T. will appear in the American [illegible] in which Mr. William Brenton has been cast as Abraham Lincoln

TRUE TO TYPE

Making 'Heroes' and Lands Fit for Them

By GILBERT SELDES

IT'S mean to mention it now, but toward the end of the war a great number of people were going about talking of a land fit for heroes to live in. I think Lloyd George originated the phrase, perhaps as a reply to Wilson's world safe for democracy, and no one asked any silly questions, because there were plenty of heroes available—the same boys whom we told that there'd be a whole world waiting for them when they came back.

No one wondered what sort of world the heroes would like to live in and everybody was quite sure that it would not be the kind of world they had been defending with their lives. Quite right, too.

TODAY I note that a Nazi propagandist says that the world is turning from the materialistic to the heroic mode, and I find, in H. R. Knickerbocker's fine dispatches that Sir Oswald Mosley hopes for a Fascist England by 1936. Obviously something went wrong with the original promise, if the victors and the vanquished are both turning to the same kind of revolution.

To me it seems that Fascism in Germany is more natural than Fascism either in Italy or in Britain. Because Fascism gives the feeling of heroism—or at least of heroics—to people, and that is what a defeated nation needs.

TO me the Hitlerite heroics are pretty cheap stuff. They have created a situation in which a public official can say, apparently without either laughter or rebuke: "Hitler is lonely. So is God. Hitler is like God." Physical cruelty, torture and organized war have been held up as desirable ends. But by every account, even the account of Hitler's enemies, the Nazis have experienced, for the first time in a generation, a feeling of hope; they have been able to turn from the past to the future. They believe in something.

Hitler had his enemies prepared for him: the world which defeated Germany, the Jews, the Communists. The Communists, on the other hand have only the capitalist system and that target has been shrinking for four years. Behind all the economic arguments of Communism lies the feeling of injustice that "the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer," but since 1929 the rich have been dwindling. Who would go into battle with the slogan: "Divide the deficits of the wealthy?"

THE heroes made in Russia are the shock troops who work in subways and factories, not the spies who uncover k[illegible] or the assassins of Czarist cousins. There are no enemies, in the great old sense, for Soviet Russia, and unless Trotsky comes back, no new enemies will be made for a long time. The overall is the Russian uniform, not a colored shirt, and the overall is not heroic.

When Wilson said, "Life is not all running to a fire," he extinguished the kind of heroism of which Theodore Roosevelt was the symbol. Our Teddy was a sort of throwback to the Wild West kind of pioneering heroism. And we haven't found a substitute; we are not heroes. On the other hand, we have a long way to go before America will be completely and perfectly a country for heroes to live in.

READING-WRITING

By WILLIAM SOSKIN

I HAVE been looking at the many reproductions of murals which Diego Rivera has done in America and reading the explanations of them in a book called Portrait of America, made up of Rivera's work and a text by Bertram D. Wolfe.

These are the paintings, frescoes, in whose behalf armies of Communists have held protest meetings, and whose manner and subjects have caused many disputes, the most famous of which was the Radio City squabble concerning the inclusion of Lenin's head in one of the panels. We may not have had a revolution in America, but we had enough flourishes and fanfare regarding Rivera's work to satisfy the most greedy proletarian appetite.

And looking at these pictures now, without benefit of mass demonstration and political pronunciamento, I am led to conclude this:

That a good painting, an important work of art, will remain a good painting and an important work of art whether you label it "Venus Rising from the Sea" or "The Spirit of the International Buttonhole Makers' Union Rising from the Petit Bourgeois Age Into the New Dawn of Collectivism."

And that an inferior painting and an unimportant work of art will not be elevated into importance by advertising it as an expression of the social revolution or by including in its confused landscape the features of Lenin, Roosevelt, Hitler, Fiorello LaGuardia or Peggy Hopkins Joyce.

The pictures in this volume include the work Rivera did for the new building of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, the murals which caused a battle in the Detroit Institute of Art and the murals in the New Workers' School, to which he took his art after it had been ousted from the Rockefeller Centre. The last two groups may be said to make up Rivera's Portrait of America.

GOOD NIGHT, JEEVES, SLEEP VERY TIGHT

By OGDEN NASH

Illustrations by O. SOGLOW.

IN my dandelion days, immersed in books,
A glutton was I for glamour;
Of almost any writer who wrote de luxe,
Not difficult to enamour.
No helpful, homely authors I imbibed,
Like Shaw and Aristotle,
But the silken roues who suaveliest described
A cold bird, and a bottle.
Aristotle,
Bird and bottle,
They blended no jit nor tottle,
So I cast my lot
With the Casanova plot,
And a good old purple dressing gown.

'TWAS a dressing gown of purple silk,
Voluminous, voluptuous and chaste;
My reprieve from the old Elk ilk
It had a crimson sash around the waist.
'Twas my ticket to select sophistication,
'Twas to mark me as a clubman and a cad,
With the morals of a Byron and a savoir faire of iron,
That purple dressing gown I never had Had I had it,
I'd studied how to lord it,
But I never
Was able to afford it.
Thus day dreams vanish,
Viz: the Persians, and the Spanish,
And that good old purple dressing gown of mine

WELL, my life was cast in a rather different mold,
For which I am duly grateful;
If many of my paths aren't paved with gold,
Still, none is entirely hateful.
As a poetaster and a family man,
I can modestly claim felicity;
And congratulate the moment when I began
My career of domesticity.
Felicity,
Domesticity,
They blend with supreme simplicity,
And upon my oath
I owe them both
To the lack of a purple silk dressing gown.

JUST a dressing gown of purple silk
Which I coveted, in an era sophomoric,
When the bills were for champagne, not milk,
And boracic was the same as boric
'Twas my ticket to select sophistication,
Together with a bottle and a bird,
Its goal was so explicit that a grosser man would miss it,
That dressing gown in which I never erred.
Had I owned one,
I knew how to gladden it;
But I never,
For I hadn't it,
And I feel that back of
My lares is the lack of
That silken purple dressing gown of mine.

LETTERS I WOULD LOVE TO MAIL

By J. P. McEVOY

Dear Mr. Palmer:

IN the morning paper this morning there was a story about you. It was tucked away, as most important stories are. Probably no one except me gathered the full significance of it. So, with your permission and that of the editor, and possibly the U. S. Commissioner, I will reprint it and later disclose my deductions.

"Robert J. Palmer was driving a truck. The truck was stopped by Federal agents just after it left the Ridge Route, headed for Los Angeles.

"The truck's cargo was covered by a tarpaulin. The federal men removed the tarpaulin. They found 122 five-gallon cans of alcohol.

"'Well, I'll be doggoned,' Palmer said. 'I was hitch-hiking, and a fellow picked me up, and got tired of driving, and told me to take the truck on into Los Angeles and leave it at the Plaza—well, I'll be doggoned.'

"The United States Commissioner heard Palmer's story—and Palmer was held under $1500 bond on a charge of transporting liquor on which the Internal Revenue tax had not been paid."

WELL, Robert, there she is, and it looks to me as though you have started something. For example, I expect some morning to read a story like this:

"George L. Whipsocket, who was suing his wife, Ambrosia, for divorce, appeared in court today. He told the judge he didn't know he was married until one morning he woke up with his ears full of rice. It seemed he was walking along the street and wandered into a big building which later he learned was a church. A man came up to him and said, 'Hold this woman's hand a minute, will you? I think she is going to faint.'

"George Whipsocket took the woman's hand and before he knew it, according to his story, a minister came up through a trapdoor, made a few strange passes, an organ started to play, forty small boys in white lace opened their mouths and sang—and that's all he remembered until he woke up on the edge of Niagara Falls.

"The judge heard his story and then asked Whipsocket if he remembered any other odd incidents of a similar nature in his life. 'In other words,' said the judge, 'our records show you were married already when this happened. How do you account for that?'

"'Co-incidence, Your Honor,' said Whipsocket, eagerly.

"'Sez you,' sez His Honor; 'I call it bigamy, and I say five years.'"

Cordially,
J. P. McEVOY.

CULTURED PEOPLE

General Knowledge of Man in the Street

By ALDOUS HUXLEY

LONDON.—A [illegible] journalist of my acquaintance [illegible] carried out an enquiry [illegible] and nature of the General Knowledge possessed by the man and woman in the street.

The investigations [illegible] are making abundantly clear that General Knowledge of the man in the street is [illegible] remarkably sketchy, to say the least of it. A little star here and another little star there and in between vast expanses of darkness. Reading this record of ignorance, the academically trained person feels [illegible] patronizing as [illegible]. How is it possible, he wonders, that anybody should fail to know such [illegible] things?

BUT now suppose that the men and women interviewed were to examine the academically trained person, not in General Knowledge, but in the various special knowledges of which each of them is a master. Here, for example, is the mechanic who would ask him to give a brief account of the way in which exhaust valves are [illegible] driven through adjustable tappets.

After that the farmer will want to know why soils fertilized with sulphate of ammonia have to be given periodical dressings of lime. And the dressmaker will question him as to the difference between [illegible] stitch, split stitch and satin stitch. And so on, indefinitely.

In almost every [illegible] the [illegible] person will have to [illegible] that he can't answer. He is as ignorant of other people's special knowledge as they are of his General Knowledge. What it comes to, in a word, is this: General Knowledge is the academic person's special knowledge. But—and this is the really interesting and significant point—the brand of knowledge possessed by the academic person has always been and is still regarded as being in some way superior to other brands. His General Knowledge is dignified with the name of culture; other people's special knowledges are not.

WHY should this be? The Marxians are ready with a simple explanation. General Knowledge is the special knowledge of the privileged classes—of the men and women who can afford not to be bothered with useful, money-making knowledge about machines, fertilizers, dressmaking and all the rest. The possession of such knowledge is just as good for purposes of social display as the possession of expensive jewelry or a large house. Therefore the poor and unprivileged have always regarded such knowledge as being highly desirable, and have accepted without protest the contempt poured on their own special and professional knowledges by the rich. The rich believe in the supreme value of "disinterested" knowledge. No wonder.

There is, unquestionably, a great deal of truth in this explanation. Nevertheless, when all possible allowances have been made for caste prejudice and snobbery, it still remains true that General Knowledge has certain cultural advantages over other kinds of knowledge. A man with an intensive knowledge of tappet rods and an extensive ignorance of everything else is mentally at home in only a very small corner of the universe of thought. Whereas a man with a fair General Knowledge of history, literature and the development of ideas, though he may not be absolutely native anywhere, is yet sufficiently at home in a very large part of the universe.

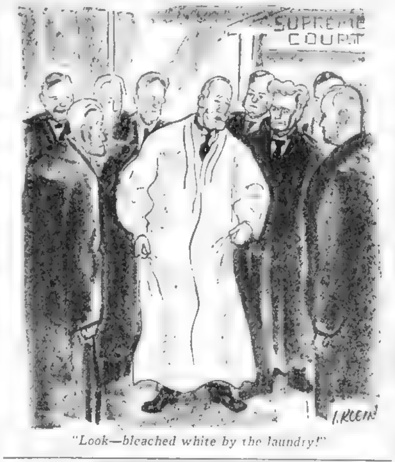
SOVIET education is trying to produce a person who shall be absolutely native to some small corner of the thinkable world, but at the same time reasonably at home elsewhere. Pupils are trained in some particular branch of useful, specialized knowledge and, simultaneously, in disinterested General Knowledge. The Russian ideal of education seems to me an admirable one. Its only defect is that it imposes a very heavy strain on the pupil. You must have a great deal of energy if you would make the best of both worlds—the practical and the pure intellectual. For a person of low vitality this strain is apt to be excessive.

"The writer shall not dig," was Emerson's conclusion, after an experiment in farming. He generalized too sweepingly; but there can be no doubt that for people of a certain physique and temperament, his rule is entirely sound.



"Look—bleached white by the laundry!"

THE IRON GARDEN

By CHAS. HANSON TOWNE

HOW shall we speak of our man-made garden,
Our garden of iron and steel,
Where the great cold blossoms of turrets and towers,
The awful blooms, the giant flowers,
Up to the blue skies reel?

This is our strange and modern Eden,
This city of agate and stone;
And the sun and moon beat down on its flowers
That bloom in the morning and midnight hours
Where the winds from the sea are blown.

They see this jungle-growth—our city
Of beauty and awful bloom
And they wonder about these marble flowers
That reach to heaven in shimmering showers,
And whisper of dread and doom.

O awful city, O beautiful city,
We dwell in your iron shade.
And with bands of gold we deck our flowers,
And polish the stems of soaring towers
In this place where dreams are made.

For you are a dream, O wild Manhattan—
A dream by the sounding sea;
And I know I shall always love your towers
That rise like monstrous lotus-flowers
In a heaven-on-earth for me.

MAGIC OF WORDS

By JOSEPH AUSLANDER

POETRY was the only compensation for John Keats's violent and exhausting one [illegible] like a drug or a [illegible] taking him away from "a burning forehead and a parching tongue" [illegible] sense of [illegible]. This was the romantic abyss, the ghastly gap between dream and realization. But always there was [illegible] that [illegible] hovered like a glittering bridge across his immediate hell. When all else failed there was always the desperate salve and serenity of words.

How did this young apothecary student come upon the magic of making over words? As a boy, he was intoxicated with Spenser's epithet "sea-shouldering whales." Through all his letters we meet this enthusiasm for the phrase, hardly less than for ideas as such excite him. He wrote to a friend that he looks upon fine phrases "as a lover."

This is in the oldest and true poetic tradition. Not since Spenser and Marlowe and Shakespeare [illegible] their [illegible] day with a [illegible] words [illegible] a treat [illegible] Keats [illegible] added [illegible] words [illegible] Words create [illegible] And Keats was [illegible] the [illegible] beauty [illegible] and single [illegible] the [illegible] passion and [illegible] of his life and his words.

KEATS [illegible] holiday in the country and hoping to find a library in Winchester arrived there one August day. He wrote to his brother George how very still it was. "Only a cane patting down a side street [illegible] every [illegible] maiden [illegible]," he said, "and the knockers have a very staid serious, nay, almost awful, quietness about them. I never saw so quiet a collection of lions' and rams' heads. [illegible] in a poem called The Eve of St Mark quite in the spirit of town quietude. I think it will give you the sensation of walking about an old country town in a coolish evening."

Let us quietly and solitary turn down a side street in another world and follow the Sabbath bell clanging at [illegible] through the damp air.

Upon a Sabbath-day it fell
Twice holy was the Sabbath-bell,
That call'd the folk to evening prayer;
The city streets were clean and fair
From wholesome drench of April rains;
And, on the western window panes,
The chilly sunset faintly told
Of unmatur'd green valleys cold,
Of the green thorny bloomless hedge,
Of rivers new with Spring-tide sledge,
Of primroses by shelter'd rills,
And daisies on the aguish hills.
Twice holy was the Sabbath-bell.
The silent streets were crowded well
With staid and pious companies,
Warm from their fire-side orat'ries;
And moving with demurest air,
To even-song and vesper prayer.
Each arched porch, and entry low,
Was fill'd with patient folk and slow,
With whispers hush and shuffling feet,
While play'd the organ loud and sweet.

This, being perfection itself, not only requires no comment, but baffles praise as well. To speak would jar the spell and tumble the delicate evening like shattered pale rose. The quality of immense quiet seems to soak through the very texture of the words like some drowsy syrup that would, if only for a moment illusory and brief, render his insistent consciousness of sorrow and the mortality of things tolerable.

Altar Candles

ALONG the borders row on row
Like flame the scarlet tulips glow
And every little vagrant breeze
That stirs the budding lilac trees
Sets all the tulips flickering,

VAGABONDIA

Opera Belongs in Italy and Nowhere Else

Says BRUNO LESSING

ROME: Re opera. They played Lucia di Lammermoor in the Royal Opera House tonight, and I'm sure the King and Queen and Mussolini and all the visiting statesmen from other countries who want to get chummy with Il Duce were there, all dolled up. I got it over the radio. With the exception of a collar and tie and a coat and shoes, I was dolled up, too. Reception was perfect and brilliant. I proposed a vote of thanks to the Radio Corporation of America and it was carried unanimously.

In America the popular operas of the Old World have become hackneyed. It started with the organ grinders of a couple of decades ago. There was a time when if you had told the judge that you'd been listening to the "Anvil Chorus" from Trovatore he would have instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of [illegible] no matter what you'd done.

Then came the jazzing cycle. Every Tom, Dick and Harry of Tin-pan Alley swiped every available tune from every popular opera and syncopated it [illegible] popularity which [illegible] a musical stomach. Then came the radio which, with its [illegible] poverty of material, broadcast the same thing over and over again. And if you really loved fine music you got so that you'd rather sit on a tin roof in the rain than listen to an old-fashioned Italian opera.

TONIGHT I got a great kick out of Lucia. To be perfectly honest I [illegible]. It is only in recent years that whatever musical taste I [illegible] has been developed. Due entirely to Mrs. [illegible] who is a Beethoven-Bach-Mozart-Brahms-Schubert-Tchaikovsky addict. In New York you couldn't have dragged me to listen to Lucia di Lammermoor. But tonight I was delighted to hear Lucia.

It is natural here in Italy—less so in Europe—but it is an unnatural, artificial form of musical entertainment in the United States.

You can't get the best flavor of Vermont maple syrup, Virginia ham, New England corn or Louisiana pompano if you send them to Europe. You can't get the best flavor of Argentine [illegible] Beluga caviar, Holland [illegible] or Pilsner beer if you [illegible] America.

OPERA belongs in Italy, fits here, sounds and looks—because it is adapted to the ear and the eye [illegible] when it is transported to another environment. Opera started in Italy as a natural way of presenting plays. Instead of talking, the actors sing their parts. Because Italy is a musical nation and all Italians have a bit of the musical complex.

Even today no Italian would be surprised if a traffic cop in Bologna sang "Where do you think you're going?" What would an American grocer think if a customer came in singing "You put me on the bum?"

OPERA never was really popular or profitable in America until New York society took it up. It became a great spectacle. But it never became an expression of any phase of American life. And it never will. It is not a form of music that fits into our scheme of things. There never can be a great American composer of opera for Americans until Americans get into the habit of singing while they work.

Years ago I went to a performance of The Barber of Seville in Venice. [illegible] A chap in front of me, with his hat on, was eating a sandwich. The baritone was singing "Come una statua"—Like a statue." And this chap with his mouth full of bread and ham yelled, "Good boy, Pietro! You sing that well."

In the Metropolitan Opera House in New York only the Italians in the gallery follow the performance as a story. It is a play for them. Even the Germans, when Tannhauser is performed, confine their interest to the music and rarely bother about the words. Opera is as artificial and out of place in German culture as it is in ours. Yet opera is really nothing more than a play told both in words and music.

AMERICA can keep on getting the best singers and the best musicians and the best conductors but can never make opera a natural American musical expression. It will always be a stunt.

Autobiographical stuff. (I really am not keen on this but it's a bit of protective coloring.) I knew Jean and Edouard de Rescke when they sang in New York. I ate spaghetti with Tamagno who was the greatest operatic tenor of his day. I often played chemin-de-fer with Caruso at the Italian Club in New York. I talked with Melba and Eames and had lunch with Emma Calve.

When Bill Parry was stage manager of the Metropolitan Opera House I joined in the "Soldiers' Chorus" of Faust—it was the last night of the season and Bill got half a dozen newspaper boys to stand behind the lines where they wouldn't be seen and help swell the noise.

THE highest and finest form of musical expression is the symphony. Maybe some day we'll turn out an American composer who'll beat Beethoven all hollow. There's no nationalism about a symphony.

Scarred

His face was scarred as though some masquing sin
Dwelt there and leered with low,
sardonic grin.
Railing at outer fate, he showed the mark
Stamped by raw passions of the fate within.

DICKENS BARES TROUBLES OF AUTHORSHIP TO SWEETHEART

AUTHOR MOVES TO RECOVER HIS LETTERS TO MARIA

Use of Epistles Would Have Made Mrs. Winter Most Sensational Woman of Age in Europe

What Has Gone Before

The cooling romance of Charles Dickens' middle-age association with Maria Beadnell Winter, the sweetheart of his youth, has been revealed in previous instalments. In the accompanying instalment Dickens explains further his preoccupations and contributes an illuminating exposition of the travail of authorship.

By H. H. HARPER

IN his letter of Feb. 22 Dickens cautioned Maria that he was "a dangerous man to be seen with," and it is easy to imagine what a flame of scandal would have sprung up if it became known that he was having covert meetings with the resuscitated "Dora" of his David Copperfield: that he had written her long, endearing love letters to a secret address, then at the same time a camouflage note to her home; that he made an appointment with her to meet him at his own home when all the household were out, excepting only himself.

Every one would have wanted to know why, if his intentions were honorable, he could not have set what he had to say, in letters addressed to her home; why he felt it necessary to assure her that she need observe no restraint in writing him at his own house; and when he invited her there why he told her to ask for Mrs. Dickens, who at that time would almost certainly be out.

The great majority would have misconstrued his real motives in all these actions, which on the surface would have looked very questionable. And no one short of his closest friends would have denied the public its delectable feast of scandal by trying to explain the whys and wherefores that lay beneath the surface.

In those days—unlike our own—the public was inclined to exercise more diligence in supervising an author's family relations than they did in determining the real merit of his writings—on the theory, perhaps, that posterity would look after the latter.

Above all things else Dickens loved notoriety, but not the sort of notoriety Maria Winter could have given him with the material he had unwisely placed in her hands. It is therefore apparent that of all the women in the world she was the most "dangerous" for him to get "mixed up" with at this precarious period of his life.

With all his letters in her possession there was no knowing what desperate measures she might resort to if he provoked her. Some newspaper or periodical would doubtless have paid handsomely for his three letters of February 10, 15 and 22, and their publication at that time, with his own positive identification of Mrs. Winter as "Dora" would have created a turmoil in which his feelings, and probably his reputation, would have suffered irreparably.

Mrs. Winter had very little to lose, and a great deal to gain, at least in notoriety; for if it were known that this great and only acknowledged love of Dickens' life had suddenly risen from the grave to which he consigned her in David Copperfield, she would easily have become the most sensational woman in England. Had she been so disposed, she could have used his letters to extort almost any amount of money at his command.

Considering these impending dangers, which must have been manifest to Dickens, there is little doubt that he had good reason to reflect on the adage: "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned"; and that he spent many anxious moments trying to figure out how to keep her friendship and at the same time get her off his hands.

To have demanded the letters back would have been worse than useless. While she had not made any threat of reprisal, it was perfectly plain that she had no intention of being discarded as unceremoniously as she herself had formerly discarded him.

It therefore became his plain duty to "let her down easy."

Being physically indisposed with a bad cold, Dickens would hardly have taken the pains to make all the excuses and explanations in the following letter had he not felt the circumstances demanded it.

In biographical importance this letter probably exceeds any passage of equal length ever written by him or about him; and had Mrs. Winter done nothing else but furnish the occasion for writing it, she would be entitled to the gratitude of the literary world.

Tuesday, Third April, 1855.

My dear Maria:

Going down to Ashford this day week, already with a bad cold, I increased it so much by getting into the intense heat consequent upon a reading of three hours and then coming up in the night (which I was obliged to do, having business in town next morning), that I was very unwell all the week, and on Friday night was so completely knocked up that I came home at 9 o'clock to bed.

A necessity is upon me now—as at most times—of wandering about in my own wild way to think. I could no more resist this on Sunday or yesterday than a man can dispense with food, or a horse can help himself from being driven. I hold my inventive capacity on the stern condition that it must master my whole life, often have complete possession of me, it makes its own demands upon me and sometimes for months together puts everything else away from me.

If I had not known long ago that my place could never be held, unless I were at any moment ready to devote myself to it entirely, I should have dropped out of it very soon. All this I can hardly expect you to understand—or the restlessness and waywardness of an author's mind. You have never seen it before you, or lived with it, or had occasion to think or care about it, and you cannot have the necessary consideration for it.

"It is only half an hour"—"it is only an afternoon"—"it is only an evening"—people say to me over and over again—but they don't know that it is impossible to command one's self, sometimes, to any stipulated and set disposal of five minutes—or that the mere consciousness of an engagement will sometimes worry a whole day. These are the penalties paid for writing books.

Whoever is devoted to an Art must be content to deliver himself wholly to it, and to find his recompense in it. I am grieved if you suspect me of not wanting to see you, but I can't help it. I must go my way whether or no.

I thought you would understand that in sending the card for the box I sent an assurance that there was nothing amiss.

I am pleased to find that you were all so much interested with the play. My ladies say that the first part is too painful and wants relief. I have been going to see it a dozen times, but I have never seen it yet, and never may. Madame Celeste is injured thereby (you see how unreasonable people are!) and says in the Green Room, with a very tight cheek, "M. Dickens est artiste! Mais il n'a jamais vu Janet Pride!"

It is like a breath of fresh Spring air to know that that unfortunate baby of yours is out of her one close room and has about half a pint of very doubtful air per day. I could only have become her godfather on the condition that she had 500 gallons of open air at any rate, every day of her life. And you would soon see a rose or two in the face of my other little friend, Ella, if you opened all your doors and windows throughout the whole of all fine weather from morning to night.

I am going off, I don't know where or how far, to ponder about I don't know what. Sometimes I am half in the mood to set off for France, sometimes I think I will go and walk about on the sea shore for three or four months, sometimes I look towards the Pyrenees, sometimes Switzerland. I made a compact with a great Spanish authority last week, and vowed I would go to Spain. Two days afterwards Layard and I agreed to go to Constantinople when Parliament rises. Tomorrow I shall probably discuss with somebody else, the idea of going to Greenland or the North Pole. The end of all this most likely will be that I shall shut myself up in some out of the way place I have never yet thought of, and go desperately to work there.

Once upon a time I didn't do such things, you say. No, but I have done them through a good many years now, and they have become myself and my life.

Ever affectionately,

C. D.

In tomorrow's installment in the Boston Evening American two more letters from Dickens to Maria will appear, also a letter to Maria from Georgina Hogarth, his sister-in-law, disclosing the inner facts of the author's unhappy married life which culminated in his separation from his wife.

POPE WILL REST IN OLD VILLA

By Associated Press

Vatican City, May 3—Within a few weeks Pope Pius plans to move from the Vatican, the residence of Popes for 64 years, to the Papal summer villa at Castel Gandolfo.

Accompanied by a few churchmen, a detachment of Swiss Guards and Papal gendarmes, the 77-year-old head of the Catholic church will spend two months or more in the rural villa which he has visited briefly on three occasions since he became Pope, it was learned today.

Church officials said that regular audiences will be held at the villa.

"Why are Old Golds so easy on the throat...so cool and biteless?"

asks Adolphe Menjou

[OLD GOLD SMOKER SINCE 1928]

Old Gold
CIGARETTES
THE TREASURE OF THEM ALL
Old Gold

Dear Mr. Menjou:—

As you know, there are many interesting arguments in the cigarette advertisements. But, after all, the proof of a cigarette, like a pudding, is in how it tastes.

We could tell you that Old Gold tobacco is picked from the heart of the stalk (and we did tell you that years ago). We could tell you that it's picked sun-ripened . . . and then aged to mellow perfection. So rich in natural flavor it needs no artificial flavoring.

But are WORDS important, when Old Gold gives you everything you like in a cigarette, including exceptional throat-ease?

Sincerely,

P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P. S.—The net of it, Mr. Menjou, is simply this: No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure . . . (No artificial flavoring).

SHOOTING BARED IN DOLE PROBE

This Is Life
by
ROBERT E. ROGERS

Every first day of May, I suppose, the Communists and all the other shades of reds, crimsons, vermilions, scarlets, magentas and pinks homeward wend their weary way after a healthful day spent in the open air, leaving the world to darkness and Mr. Hultman—and smiling a secret and probably unlawful smile at the uniformed force, the ogpu, and the Constitution.

Robert E. Rogers

I don't know as I blame them. I'd do it myself. Does any one in his right senses suppose for a moment that any celebration of May Day in America, unchaperoned by the police, would result in violence or bloodshed—except between the Communists and the Socialists? I understand that in New York on Tuesday the chief use of the police was to keep the Left Wing from harming, hurting, and inconveniencing the Right Wing, just a little family unpleasantness between the sons of Karl Marx and the sons-in-law.

I suspect that if the Reds had been allowed to have the Common to themselves on Tuesday they would not have drawn much more of an audience than the Sunday soap-boxers and agnostics. It was the police the public came to see, with their night sticks and riot guns and tear gas—and General Butler who is all three rings in himself both as orator and guide to righteousness. Lacking them, there would have been only Communist oratory.

As it is, this ancient habit of filling the public places with cops armed to the teeth, suspending all leave, and all that, does not so much make the radicals ridiculous as the police. With every policeman walking his beat or directing traffic out in the bushes, there still would be no trouble. We are not Europeans and we do not do things in the European way.

I marvel, sometimes, how the Europeans can collect in such large numbers to listen to speeches and mill around in their huge public places to watch some troops reviewed. A day or two ago I saw a newsreel of hundreds of thousands of Fascists listening to Mussolini in the great square in front of the Victor Emmanuel Memorial. And yesterday the morning papers estimated the crowd that went out to hear Hitler in Berlin as numbering nearly two millions. And the May Day demonstration in the Red Square at Moscow was no handful. But that was military, that was under orders. So what? someone will ask. Don't you suppose the Mussolini and Hitler demonstrations were ordered also? Maybe so. But there's no power on earth can get out more than a comparatively few dozen thousands in America, even for a football game, or baseball or a prize fight, or a presidential inauguration, or a patriotic demonstration.

Even in Paris and Vienna, where trouble might most have been expected, things were pretty quiet. Of course, the standing army was all set. But I suspect that if the demonstrators had been allowed to demonstrate in peace they would have been so flabbergasted at not being disturbed that they couldn't have done anything about it. Traditionally May Day is the day for harmless and melodramatic gestures, not for concerted and useful action.

The only city in this country where it might be not altogether healthy to send all the police home to bed is New York. More and more it becomes obvious that New York is a sour note in the national anthem. It is more like a European city. It is un-American. It takes art and music and literature seriously. It takes education very seriously, to the point of raising the devil whenever the question comes up. And it takes demonstrations seriously. The foreign born and their unassimilated children—mostly students at Columbia and C. C. N. Y.—are always ready to forego work and study and even leisure, at the drop of a hat and go out to demonstrate. Only in Union Square or before the Columbia Library can you see massed numbers that are even a fraction of those posing for the newsreels in any continental city. But, fortunately, nearly always, as soon as a good revolutionary demonstration gets under way a new Mae West film opens at Rockefeller City and the revolution repairs thither to stand patiently in line for the late show.

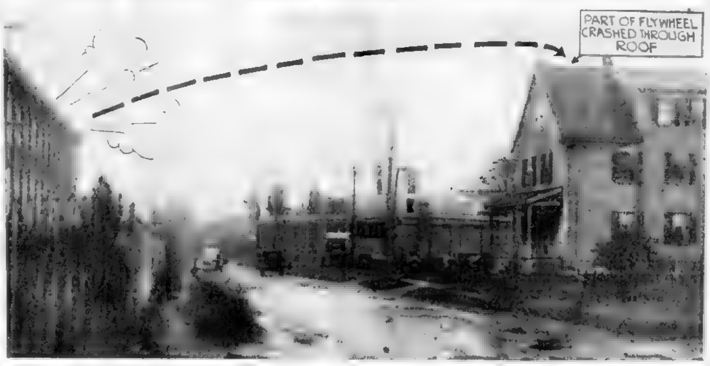
All in all, on such pleasant and traditional occasions as May Day the police are merely so many innocent agents provocateurs. Or are they entirely innocent? The temper of the American people is fundamentally Laodicean—we blow neither hot nor cold. If the entertainment is amusing, they attend it in moderate numbers. If not, they stay away. On the whole they prefer professional amusement and skilled entertainers to the amateur kind, whether such be Communists or police or congressmen or former officers of the Marine Corps. None of them are quite as good as Cagney and Tracy or Thelma Todd and SaZu (or ZaSu) Pitts.

Only if the police forget their recent experiences and go back to their old, bad, unintelligent ways of clubbing and chivying about is there any danger of the spectacle becoming serious. And the American public won't like that. They'll stay away altogether. And then what will become of the revolution?

Flying Wheel Crashes Home in Ice House Blast



MRS. EDNA ARCIKOWSKI

AMELIA DIGITS

Hurled out of the Eastern Ice Co. plant in Taunton by an explosion, a huge fly wheel crashed through the roof of a home across the street and narrowly missed killing a woman and her young sister. The scene of the strange accident at Chandler ave. is shown above. Mrs. Edna Arcikowski and Amelia Digits, 8, were sitting at a table in their home when the wheel crashed through. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

SCORE ESCAPE IN BLAST

Taunton, May 3—A score of persons were being congratulated today on their narrow escapes from death while others were recovering from slight injuries resulting from the explosion of the flywheel on a 125-horsepower engine in the plant of the Eastern Ice Manufacturing Company.

Fragments of the flywheel were sent hurtling out of the plant and one large piece whirled 300 feet through the air and crashed through the roof of a house, missing two women in the building by inches.

Mrs. Alice Smerdon was under treatment at Morton Hospital for shock, sustained as a result of her narrow escape. Several other persons were recovering from slight bruises and abrasions suffered from the explosion.

2 MORE GIRLS ARE MISSING

A white slave [illegible] was being hunted throughout the state today as two more Cambridge girls were reported missing, bringing the total to four within a month.

A widespread search was immediately launched by Detective-Capt. John J. Conney, when the disappearance of the latest two was reported to him today.

Alice Burns of [illegible] Aberdeen avenue, a student at St. Joseph's Academy, Brighton, was the first girl to vanish. No clue has been found as to her whereabouts.

The second girl to disappear was [illegible] of Columbia [illegible]

Canary Gives Clerk 'Bird'

Clerk William Burns of the Arthur Samners drug store in Marblehead jumped in bed at midnight after a trying day at the store where he had been doing double duty in the absence of his sick employer.

It seemed to him that he had hardly closed his eyes when the telephone rang. It was 4.30. A distinctly feminine voice asked him, pleadingly:

"Will you please bring some chloriform up to my home immediately?"

Burns, with visions of sudden death and disaster, asked how much would be needed.

"Only a very small amount," said the lady, "my canary has had a convulsion."

BANDIT MAKES RETURN CALL

When Antonio Sicarello of Short st., Malden, proprietor of a variety store at 74 Faulkner st., Malden, looked up today to see what customer had entered, he sighted the bandit who, on April 13, had held him up in the store.

"Sure, I'm the same fellow," said the armed man, noting Sicarello's eyebrows raise.

"What are you here for now?" asked the storekeeper.

"The same thing," replied the bandit.

Wearily, Sicarello removed the contents of the cash drawer, $10, and handed [illegible] money to the bandit.

"Now this time if you tell the police, I'll kill you," the gunman warned.

But Sicarello who on the first occasion had waited nearly 24 hours before notifying police, reported the second holdup immediately.

MAYOR SERVED SUMMONS

Mayor Mansfield today was served with a summons to appear in South Boston District Court on May 15 as a co-defendant in a civil action brought by a city employe who is suspended from his position in the building department.

Joseph D. Toomey, the employe, who is a World War veteran, brought a petition against Edward W. Roemer, [illegible] asking for a review of the facts of his case for the purpose of reversing the order of suspension.

Toomey appeared before Judge Edward L. Logan today. After reading the petition Judge Logan ordered Toomey to [illegible] the summons for the mayor to appear.

The mayor [illegible] the summons to the [illegible] and said he would [illegible] appear in court in person.

Toomey insists that under civil service [illegible] veterans must be employed in preference to others.

FRAUDULENT CARDS FOUND

Here [illegible] 300 men welfare [illegible] welfare office [illegible] Hawkins st. a corps of clerks and visitors examined their cards and found two of the recipients with fraudulently stamped cards.

The two men were taken to the headquarters to await questioning by Special Officer Ernest Fanjoy.

The [illegible] of the welfare [illegible] men [illegible] East Boston where the fraudulent stamps were first [illegible] were at the office for their weekly pay.

The shooting [illegible] today occurred in the South End and was the result of a declared "double cross" between principals in the frauds, and the slashing in Dorchester is ascribed to the same cause.

Four more welfare [illegible] and possibly six faced arrest today in the alleged welfare swindle as Special Officer Ernest Fanjoy, attached to the welfare department, investigated a Roxbury [illegible] employed by the bureau.

The [illegible] a habitue of [illegible] where he runs with a group of [illegible] fixers, is suspected [illegible] understood [illegible] welfare department rubber stamp being used to stamp bogus cards of recipients.

The stamps, it is declared, are in the hands of a ring of former bootleggers, dope pedlars and bookmakers who have been reaping a profit of about $600 a week through the frauds.

The two men taken today [illegible] may face arrest but [illegible] in addition to [illegible] yesterday are [illegible] it was made known by Special Officer Fanjoy.

POLICE IRE NORTON

Today the original eight were to have been arraigned in municipal court on fraud and larceny charges but instead of the cases being called it was announced that they had been put over until tomorrow.

City Councilor Clement A. Norton, who [illegible] at the [illegible] over the [illegible] and he issued a statement which said:

"The public has waited 48 hours for further developments in this scandal. The courts have done their part. Warrants have been issued. It now rests with Officer Fanjoy.

"The officers of the welfare department are hostile to any investigation and will not co-operate with the City Council committee now attempting to investigate the welfare department.

"I would remind Mr. Fanjoy, however, that though assigned to the welfare office, he is still a member of the police department. His investigation has been dragging long enough.

"I call upon Mayor Mansfield to co-operate with the council in its efforts to drive fraudulent recipients of aid from the welfare lists. The mayor has done nothing as yet.

O. O. McIntyre
NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

New York, May 3—In a world poised on a pinnacle of doubt there is a heart-twisting calm [illegible] of a Bowery mission. Here are [illegible] have reached the zero of despair, a blur [illegible] and yet the majority have faith. They have not lost the will to hope.

O. O. McIntyre

Every mission, of course, [illegible] large percentage of chronic [illegible] resisting all currents for betterment. But there is a surprising quota of those who, having touched bottom, expect to rise again. I stopped in at [illegible] evening services of [illegible] Hall recently.

Cracked voices were singing [illegible] hymn while a few in [illegible] of fatigue and [illegible] slumped on the benches. At the testimony period a [illegible] middle-aged fellow, with a Scotch burr, stood up. His fervor seemed to burn away the [illegible] and enter a symbol of promise.

He had been a drunkard and in many [illegible]. But for eight months he had lived straight. That day he had made 60 cents at some odd job. The first work in five weeks. Once he had made $11,000 a year. He would again. He felt it so tremendously that somehow [illegible] would.

From the Bowery I invaded the warren of mean, dirty streets that tangle and skirt about Brooklyn Bridge. Under the bridge arches clutters of outcasts were brewing the Americanized version of the pot au feu known as Mulligan stew. In a group about one blaze, an exhorter in a liquid exiled manner was expounding a doctrine I suspect was communistic. I edged a curb and listened respectfully. His anger at capitalism was venemous.

I am [illegible] a bit put out at capitalism myself. Yet there is one institution that has grown up among it for which I forgive much. Ladies and gentlemen, the red-fronted five-and-ten-cent store! Here is the great American leveler in which Mrs. Vincent Astor rubs elbows with Gertie Murphy of Avenue A. The brilliantly lit five-and-ten is not only the most democratic institution the capitalistic system has reared, but is good fun at little cost.

[illegible] I know tells me that since Henry L. Mencken [illegible] from an editorial chair his income has tripled! Magazine editors, knowing of his new freedom, deluged him with offers to write [illegible] that they would welcome whatever he sent on any subject. He is a prolific turner-out of copy [illegible] to write, and as he is no poor shakes of a business man the shekels have been pouring in. Or so it is said!

The beerstable section of Yorkville along 86th st. has not been vanquished by repeal nor has the garish electric glitter outside lost its dazzle, but customers are coy and reluctant—mostly stolid family beer sippers in the neighborhood. In its opulence the made-over houses, with their gaudy Bavarian fronts and waiters in short leather pants and yodel hats were jammed nightly with downtown steppers. They were the sort who had reached the stage of intoxication wherein they enjoyed singing the repetitious inanity known as the Schnitzelbank. That means you're ossified.

Thingamabobs: Don Marquis, with three members of his family in a hit play, has gone fishing in Florida . . . Bob Davis covered 42,000 miles on his recent trip to South Africa . . . Chic Sale has cleaned up a tidy sum in a vaudeville barn-storming of the Puget Sound country . . . King Carol of Rumania subscribes to four American press clipping bureaus . . . James Montgomery Flagg, who has sketched more beautiful women than any artist of his time, still blushes . . . Gladys Swarthout, young metropolitan singer, is a product of Deep Water, Missouri . . . Owen Davis never rests more than three days between plays.

Because I walk along the streets usually lost in muttering abstractions, I often put on a sidewalk humoresque that should yank me before a lunacy board. Last dusk near Brentano's on 47th st. I was wondering just what the European topple had done to Rene, ex-clown of the Cirque Medrano so long conducting that pert little toy botique in the rue des Petits Champs. Only the day before a letter from him said he would like to become a [illegible] in America. So in my strolling fancy I had employed him: "Never," I must have said out loud, "touch my desk!" And a feminine voice from a shadowy doorway trilled, "Or papa'll spank!" No bat out of the bad place ever rounded a corner faster.

Auto Crash Hurts Man, Grandson

Frederick Schew of 23 Hood st. Cliftondale, and his 12-year-old grandson, Robert E. Fowler of 283 Lowell st., Somerville, were injured today when their automobile skidded in Broadway, Malden, crashed into a telegraph pole, tore away 20 feet of fence and was wrecked.

Grandfather and grandson were taken to Maplewood Hospital, Malden, the former with two bad gashes on the forehead and a possible fractured skull, and the latter with a gash in his left thigh.

New Met Film Cue Is From Air Romance

"Twenty Million Sweethearts," film romance of the radio, will be premiered at the Metropolitan next Friday. The production is said to be an innovation in film entertainment. The story by Paul Finder Moss and Jerry Wald, deals with the romances of radio folk, and with their struggles and successes.

The picture has catchy songs, written by Warren and Dubin. There is a strong cast, with Pat O'Brien in the leading role, a semi-comic part in which he plays a fast talking though blundering talent scout for a radio company, who boosts others to fame while he himself is left out in the cold. The picture introduces as the romantic team Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers. The Four Mills Brothers will be heard, and Ted Fio Rito and his band [illegible] the accompaniment to one of Powell's songs. Others in the cast are Allen Jenkins, Grant Mitchell, Joseph Cawthorne, Joan Wheeler, Henry O'Neill and Johnny Arthur.

March's Moustache

Fredric March's experiences seem to work by [illegible] screen appearance in "The Royal Family," in which he gave a brilliant performance, called for a moustache, which the producers feared to have him shave off lest he might not be so good looking without it. Then when word went out that he'd have to grow whiskers again for his portrayal of Benvenuto Cellini in "The Firebrand," his women admirers were worried lest his appearance might be marred thereby. The fears of both groups were groundless!

Film Festival for Weekend in Boston

This weekend brings a rare troop of new pictures. For today's openings, there are the premiere late in the evening of "Stand Up and Cheer," at Keith's, the Paramount and Fenway will show "Merry Wives from Reno" and "Double Door," the latter based on the stage play seen at the Plymouth not long since, and the Fine Arts has one of the grandest of all actresses, Mme Tchekova, in "Troika," and "Broken Shoes."

More big pictures come in on Friday—"Viva Villa" to Loew's State, "Twenty Million Sweethearts" to the Metropolitan; "No Greater Glory," a Frank Borzage gem, and "Sisters Under the Skin" to the RKO Boston, and "Tarzan" to the Orpheum.

Change of Hours

Because of the length of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's spectacular picture "Viva Villa," Loew's State announces that the doors will be opened daily at 11:45 a. m. The first showing of the film will start at 12 o'clock daily.

Lights and Shadows

By

John Gilbert's sad score now stands at two blondes, two brunettes, in four attempts at being an ideal husband. The blonde half of his fireside career comprises Ina Claire and Virginia Bruce, in that chronological order. The brunettes were Leatrice Joy and Olive Burrell, in I forget which order. This perhaps reads as if I were getting ready to advise John to try a red-head instead, when I read that Mrs Virginia Bruce Gilbert had filed suit for divorce and had calculated her divorce dower right as exactly $[illegible] a week plus a property settlement, memory went back to a visit with Ina Claire soon after her spectacular marriage to the "great lover" of the silent films.

Ina Claire

Married two or three months, Ina was residing in a Beverly Hills bungalow while her bridegroom was living on the crest of a foothill a mile or so away. This arrangement had the closely knit community buzzing, and Ina knew it, and so in her very frank manner she anticipated curiosity by telling all about it. I remember that in the telling she described John as "divine" and as "a man of steel."

I had been present in a New York night club nine years previously when Ina and her first husband, Jim Whittaker, came to the final decision to go their separate ways. The meeting took place in the old Plantation Club, and Florence Mills was the featured entertainer. Charlie MacArthur, Jim and Ina talked it over in a private huddle, while I, unaware that the star and her newspaperman husband [illegible] it quits, waited a table.

Consequently, I followed Ina's vivacious [illegible] years later with extreme interest. She impressed me as being in great earnest to make this second marriage a success. When she got around to discussing her reason for a separate domestic establishment she dropped a hint or two. The "man of steel" evidently had his own ideas about a man's place around the home, because Ina mentioned that there was a high possibility of clashing temperaments.

Well, the divorce came soon. I notice in dispatches about the Virginia Bruce Gilbert divorce that the actress accused her husband of "being arrogant, belittling her and countermanding her orders to the servants." I can imagine any husband, even "a man of steel" countermanding an order by Miss Ina Claire!

Virginia Bruce

Now comes more Hollywood divorce news over the teletype. Corinne Griffith, who starred here a few months ago in "Design for Living" at the Plymouth is one of the principals and Walter Morosco, one-time film producer the other. Miss Griffith is a fine actress off-stage. If ever I met a devoted couple, it was Mr. and Mrs. Morosco.

Joan Crawford, Clark Gable Will Have Leading Roles in M-G-M "Chained"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 3. The [illegible] of Joan Crawford and Clark Gable did all right for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer long before Gable went East and [illegible] ladies stealing his handkerchiefs. BLOOD-STAINED AUTO TRACED TO DILLINGER

By International News Service

Chicago, May 3—Convinced that John Dillinger and his gang of outlaw killers are in hiding here, Federal authorities today concentrated their man hunt in the North Side where a blood-stained auto was found abandoned by the gangsters.

Approximately 50 Federal operatives were summoned here by Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the department of justice bureau of investigation, to join the hunt. The raiding squads were ordered to find Dillinger and kill him.

Augmenting the Federal raiders were the 40 picked police marksmen.

BLOODSTAINS IN CAR

Police and federal investigators were convinced after studying the abandoned auto that Dillinger and some of his men fled here the night of April 23, just 24 hours after they had escaped from a federal trap at the Little Bohemia resort near Mercer, Wis.

Bloodstains on the seats and emergency surgical kits found in the car convinced authorities that one or more of the outlaws had been wounded, either in the gun battles near Mercer or in an exchange of shots with deputy sheriffs near South St. Paul. Packets of matches found on the seats bore the name of the Little Bohemia resort, where Dillinger and his men had spent the week-end.

ROUTE IS TRACED

Other evidence in the auto clearly traced the flight of Dillinger. A Dubuque, Ia., newspaper, dated April 23, indicated that the gangsters had fled from south St. Paul to Dubuque on U. S. Highway 61.

Dillinger then continued to Chicago, completing the 105-mile drive late that night, police believe.

To permit an unobstructed line of fire in case of pursuit the gangsters had removed the rear window from the auto. Its top had been saturated with an inflammable fluid to permit quick destrution. Fingerprint experts found the outlaws had sprayed the car with some fluid to obliterate all fingerprints.

Suspected of being a pal of Herbert Youngblood, a Negro, who broke out of the Crown Point, Ind., jail with Dillinger in the famous "toy gun" escape, Henry Johnson, also a Negro, was seized today for questioning. According to police, Johnson made a $7,000 deposit for Youngblood at one time.

Out of Jungle Jumps Cupid

Made Chief

Myron Shellman long identified with Paramount Publix theatres, has just been appointed managing director of the Rivoli theatre in Roxbury, by District Manager Francis W. McManus. During his first day on the new assignment Manager Shellman laid plans for celebrating the Rivoli's Eighth anniversary, starting next Saturday, by booking two feature pictures, "Riptide," starring Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery, and "Come On Marines," featuring Richard Arlen and Ida Lupino, together with Popeye The Sailor in "The Man on the Flying Trapeze."

Long known to this department, Shellman was formerly under Frank Hookailo one of the finest showmen Boston ever had. He has his assignments from Publix in other sections of New England.

'Submerged Smile'

Learning to smile under water is the latest in requirements for an actress in talking pictures! This unusual accomplishment was mastered by Maureen O'Sullivan for [illegible] with Johnny Weissmuller in "Tarzan and His Mate," at the Loew's Orpheum.

She was photographed by a special under-water camera while swimming with Weissmuller during scenes.

BOSTON ACE SET FOR ROME HOP

New York, May 3—Cesare Sabelli and Capt. George Pond were forced to postpone their projected New York-to-Rome flight on account of weather conditions.

The two fliers, who have made several unsuccessful attempts to hop for Sabelli's native country, had their monoplane "Leonardo Da Vinci" in readiness at Floyd Bennett field for a takeoff.

"The last buckle is ready," said Sabelli.

But weather has balked every previous attempt of the two fliers to hop for Rome since they banded together in August, 1933. Sabelli first planned the flight in 1928 with Roger Q. Williams, but they failed to start.

Ocean Flier Former Boston Newspaperman

Capt. Pond, a former Boston newspaperman and flier at the Squantum naval air reserve base, was a pioneer in the ship-to-shore mail plane flights in 1927. At that time he carried out the first successful flights from the Leviathan to shore when the liner was 60 miles off Ambrose light.

On the eve of the last flight he planned to make with Sabelli last Winter, Capt. Pond disappeared but returned a short time later only to have the proposed hop balked by adverse weather conditions once again.

Capt. Pond has been making his headquarters in this city for some time. He is married, his wife and two children making their home in Arlington, Mass.

Thompson's Yacht Swept by Flames

Chicago, May 3 (AP) — Flames swept the upper structure of former Mayor Thompson's 200-ton steam yacht Doris, causing damage from $5,000 to $10,000 early today.

The craft was covered with a large tarpaulin and firemen said they believed someone tossed a cigarette onto it. The upper portion of the boat was destroyed before two fireboats extinguished the flames.

Thurston Traps Jewel Thief at Rothschild's Party

This is the seventh in a series of thrilling experiences that Thurston, the Magician, is writing for Boston Evening American Secret Agent X-9 members.

Turn to the comic section of this issue and find out how you may become a Secret Agent X-9.

Thurston, the great magician now showing at the Metropolitan theater, advises all members of the Boston American's Secret Agent Clubs—both boys and girls—to study magic and learn a few tricks.

"A little knowledge of sleight of hand is a useful accomplishment," he writes. "One never knows when it will come in handy—no pun intended. It has been of invaluable service to me off as well as on the stage. Many of my best performances have been given when I have been working with the law."

It was Thurston who drilled the detectives of famous Scotland Yard in the mysteries of magic and in slight of hand. Thurston tells the story:

By THURSTON—THE MAGICIAN

While playing in London, in 1900, I received an invitation to entertain a party of 200 guests at the late Baron Rothschild's home—most of them royalty. Among them was the Shah of Persia. Between tricks, a small army of waiters weaved in and out the company, serving refreshments. During these waits, I sat on the small stage at the end of the huge salon, until Baron Rothschild gave me the signal to go on with the show. Naturally I watched what was going on in these intervals with keen interest. I don't think much of anything escaped me, for a magician is trained to use his eyes as well as his hands. I watched the waiters especially, admiring the deftness of their service.

SHAH LOSES GEM

Sometime after the performance, when I was packing up, the Baron came to me. I could see he was perturbed.

"Thurston, something terrible has happened. The Shah of Persia has lost an emerald of great value. I don't know what to do. What do you suggest?"

"That you do nothing at present. Meanwhile, having finished entertaining your guests, I will go down stairs and entertain your servants."

"You have an idea?" he said.

"I have an idea," I replied. "Please have me conducted to the servants' hall, and have some of the secret service men here follow after me."

I did have an idea, or a hunch, or whatever you call it. During my work on the stage I had noticed particularly the waiter who had so solicitously served the Shah of Persia. This waiter was now among my audience. I selected him for one of my tricks.

"Will you select a card?" I asked him.

He took a card, replaced it in the deck, which he shuffled.

"You are sure your card is in the pack?" I asked.

"Yes," he said, rather surlily.

"Look and see."

He looked through the pack. His card was not there.

"You're something of a magician yourself," I said. "Look in your pocket."

GIVES SELF AWAY

Off his guard for the moment, his hand moved toward his watch pocket. Then he caught himself, and his hand went inside his coat.

But that instinctive first movement gave him away. At my signal the secret service operatives caught his arms and reaching into his watch pocket, I not only produced the drawn card but also the Shah's emerald.

It was at Baron Rothschild's suggestion that Scotland Yard took up the study of the psychology of magic and through his influence that I was commissioned to train operatives.

B. U. Junior Prom Tomorrow Night

Boston University's gala function of the year, the Junior Prom, will be held tomorrow night at the Copley-Plaza Hotel. More than 400 guests are expected to attend. The prom is the climax of a series of colorful events held as part of Junior Week.

The highlight of the affair will be the coronation of Miss Catherine Fraleigh of Everett as "Queen of the Prom." Miss Fraleigh, a junior at the college of liberal arts, was recently voted the most popular girl at Boston University.

HEIRESS THEFT SHOWDOWN DUE

By International News Service

Tucson, Ariz., May 3—A showdown in the kidnaping of June Robles is imminent. With the truce entered into by all law enforcement agencies to permit full and free contact with her family expiring at midnight, developments were believed near today.

It was learned that Department of Justice agents are prepared to step into the investigation again on a moment's notice, providing "developments warrant."

While the nature of the expected developments was not explained, it was believed to be connected with asserted secret negotiations in Mexico for the return of the six-year-old child, now missing eight days.

Although Bernabee Robles, aged grandfather of little June, upon whom the demand for $15,000 ransom was made, remained at his home here awaiting developments. One of his trusted agents was in Mexico on a mystery mission.

He was Al Guirre, trusted chauffeur of the Robles family. He crossed the border into Sonora at Nogales yesterday and early today had not returned. He was one of the two men who accompanied Bernabee Robles on his first excursion into Mexico. Bernabee Robles denied Aguirre's trip was connected with the kidnaping.

Maine Committee Woman Quits Job

Washington, May 3 (AP)—Postmaster General Farley, Democratic national chairman, announced today he had received the resignation of Helen C. Donahue as a Democratic national committee woman from Maine.

She explained that her new duties as postmistress of Portland would not permit her to give due attention to the political post.

K. C. Communion Planned

Brookline Council, No. 110, Knights of Columbus, will hold its annual communion-breakfast, Sunday May 20, under the direction of Dr. Daniel F. McCabe, Grand Knight, and James Dumphy, chairman of the committee in charge.

LEAGUE FOES IN NEW ACTION

Further revelations of activity of an international lobby spreading propaganda for the League of Nations and the League Court under the guise of "peace" meetings in the middle west serve to bring more volunteers into the campaign against foreign entanglements being conducted by the Boston Evening American and Hearst newspapers.

From a dozen sources, some of them as far away as Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois, the Boston Evening American has received letters lauding the movement to petition Congress against American participation in the League Court and warning that international agents are organizing so-called "peace" rallies and meetings for "the betterment of international relations."

THINK THERE'S NO DIFFERENCE IN GASOLINES?

What's the real truth about gasolines? Is any one really uniformly better than the others? You'll find the frank, unvarnished answer to these questions in the amazing story of tests on famous American hills with 33 gasolines . . .

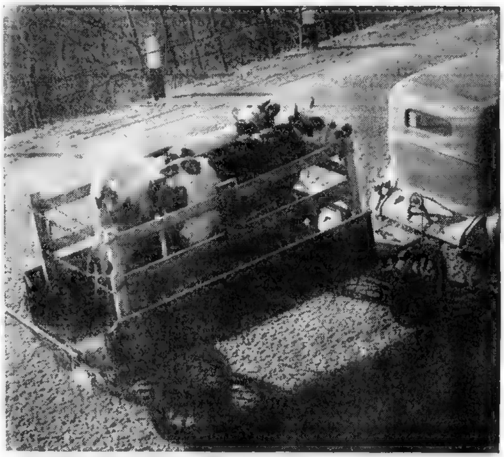
Beginning last fall, Gulf started a series of tests which lay to rest forever the theory that "there's no difference in gasolines!"

We journeyed to famous American hills—from Massachusetts to South Carolina. On 12 mountain grades, we tested 33 gasolines—including every well-known brand sold within the area visited.

The object of each test was to find out how far each gasoline would propel a car and heavy load up the grade before the motor stalled—and so prove, once and for all, that there is a big difference in the power of various gasolines.

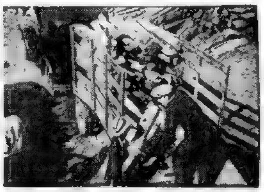
NOW READ THE STARTLING RESULTS . . .

©1934, GULF REFINING CO., PITTSBURGH, PA.

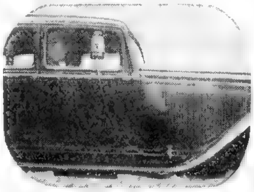


HOW THE TESTS WERE MADE—One at a time, the gasolines competed to see which could pull a car and heavy load farthest up a mountain grade. Car was kept in high gear. Picture shows Petersburg Mt. (near Williamstown, Mass.) test. Results of all tests certified by notary public.

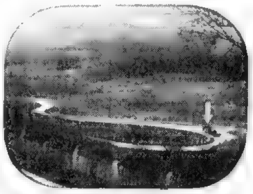
GOATS TAKE A RIDE—Charles C. Smith, Chattanooga, Chevrolet owner, tows 16 goats up a terrific grade. Gulf finished first, out of 13 gasolines!



MAKING IT TOUGH for the gasolines—The Ford test car backs up to the Farmer's Cooperative Ass'n. siding and takes on a load of wood for the Mt. Pisgah, N. C. Test—in which Gulf beat 8 other Gasolines.



NEW KIND OF GAS TANK—Gas being tested was placed in jar, which fed direct to carburetor. This made possible quick changes of gasoline for each test run.



OFF TO CHIMNEY ROCK—Jack Weaver's 1933 Oldsmobile, with 2-1000 lb. mules in tow, testing 9 gasolines on the celebrated Chimney Rock, N. C., hill. Gulf wins!

GULF wins more hill tests than 32 other gasolines combined!

HOW 33 GASOLINES RANKED (IN ALL TESTS TO DATE)

Mr. Foulproof Taylor Returns With a New Protective Device ↕ Hornsby, the Man Who Whistled Away His Fortune; the Mat 'Gaul'

By AUSTEN LAKE

Mr. Foulproof Taylor was in Boston today, inviting people to belt him over the head with a ballbat or a desk chair. This is a change in technique for "Foulproof," because it was not so long ago that he was visiting around newspaper offices and prize fight quarters asking, please, to be kicked in the stomach, without liability to the kicker.

Austen Lake

Now, this would seem odd, were it not that Mr. Taylor, who is a frail little man with nose glasses and a light sprout of fuzz on his head, has made nice profits from being kicked in the stomach and is wishful of making some more dollars by being whaled over the noggin.

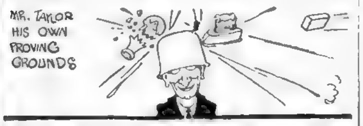
Mr. Taylor is the man who created the groin-protector which, by law, every professional fighter in Massachusetts must wear in the ring, and which has stopped the boys from gentling themselves to the canvas while clutching their abdomens and wailing for a foul.

This had grown to be such a common habit, before Mr. Taylor came along, that one fighter hardly dared strike another fighter any lower than the shoulder blades for fear of having his blow impugned.

Mr. Taylor's invention was a great boon to prize fighting, because there was no worse bore than a fouled fighter, either real or fancied. The patrons of the ennobling sport would turn to one another with thumb and forefinger clamped to their nostrils in an expressive gesture, discounting the agonized writhings of the fouled athlete as a sham and a fraud and leaving him, without charity, to be swept up with the ringside rubbish.

He Wants to Double His Benefaction

Well, Mr. Taylor did away with all that by designing a harness-sheathing which was light as a politician's promise and tough as a banker's conscience. And he, who had never worn a fighting glove in his life and was a mild man at heart, peddled his device personally in the cave-of-the-wind gymnasiums and requested to be thumped, kicked or rammed below the belt. And, finally, he sold the gadget, which by this time is standard equipment in every state and some European countries.



MR. TAYLOR HIS OWN PROVING GROUNDS

Today he is around again, giving seances with a football helmet of his own design, built like an old-fashioned coal-scuttle and unyielding as a stove lid, which he fits over his light sprout of head-fuzz and desires to be slugged with a window sash, a milk bottle or anything handy and hard. Sometimes, after being flogged, he will heighten the dramatic effect by spitting out a couple of property teeth, which are concealed in the slack of his cheek, and then give a cheerful grin.

And sometimes, when prospective customers are too timid to hit him a proper lick, he will haul off and butt his head against a door casing or a steel filing cabinet and jar the building to its foundations. Mr. Taylor says he wishes only to be as great a benefactor to football as he was to boxing, and thinks maybe a little printed mention will draw the notice of college authorities.

Hornsby, the Cautious Spendthrift, Arrives

Rogers Hornsby, the man who made a baseball fortune estimated at a quarter of a million dollars and squandered the fortune without being a spectacular spendthrift or ever enjoying expensive tastes, arrived in town this morning with his St. Louis Browns to tilt with the Red Sox.

I am hearing how Rogers, now that he is no longer earning robust money and is nearing the end of his physical tether, has taken moral stock of himself and is setting aside enough to buy himself a little pension. Hornsby's case has always seemed pathetic, since he has led a rigorous private life, eschewing rum and night life, and denying himself all the little luxuries like tobacco and the movies.

When he went broke suddenly several years ago, he held no phony stocks, and it was reported that he lost his money in mistaken guessing on fast horses. Where he was always a cautious man with a cash dollar he is said to have bet thousands through the medium of bookmaker's receipts without realizing that it was real money.

Ruth and Hornsby are the only ball players whose earnings in the boom days compared with the prize fighters of the Dempsey era, when money seemed to be printed for spending and passed through people's fingers like water through a screen. But, where Ruth squandered his early money in forms of frivolity and self-indulgence and has no regrets, Hornsby's slipped away without his ever feeling the texture of the metal and paper.

Now, in his elder day, Rogers is salvaging what he can from his once great genius and with careful spending may save enough to retire, when the time comes, to his Missouri farm instead of the palaces and pleasures with which he might have beguiled his old age.

There is no immediate prospect of having the three world wrestling champions, Ed George, Jim Browning and Jim Londos, meeting to clarify the title air.

In fact this would be the height of folly and break down the commercial illusion which is the backbone of the business, since the folk who pay the freight in each wrestling capital, Boston where Bowser is king, Philadelphia and Ray Fabiani, New York and Jack Curley, regard their champion as the only authentic.

Thus while the czars exchange their champs for minor engagements, the wrestling world, like Ceasar's ancient Gaul, continues to be divided in three parts.

BROWNS-SOX IS POSTPONED BY RAIN

By Bill Grimes

Sir Rogers Hornsby brought his charges, the St. Louis Browns, into town today after an all night train dash only to learn that the weather man had rained out the first game of the St. Louis series with the Red Sox.

The Browns are a cocky lot, having taken a series with Detroit and preventing the Tigers from gaining second place. But they will have to put their best foot forward against the Sox who are still smarting over the 21-11 defeat they suffered at the hands of the Athletics yesterday, after piling up a six run lead in the first two innings.

OWENS DESERVES "A"

Despite their numerous lapses, errors of commission and omission, the Red Sox would still have come up with the verdict but for a weird decision at the plate in the fifth inning. Rabbit Warstler tried to score on a wild peg by Billy Werber. Eddie Morgan got the ball to Rick Ferrell in time to nip the former Sox. Ferrell took the throw right on the base line, and there was no play.

Ferrell who is not an alibi artist, declares he tagged Rabbit [illegible] the way up. But, even though he missed his man, and there is no reason for believing that he did, Umpire Owens should have called Warstler out for running out of the base line, which he was obliged to do to get around the Red Sox catcher. And if Clarence had been a smart arbitrator he would have seen his out, when the Rabbit failed to hit the d[illegible] which he would have, had he figured there was any chance of his getting by Ferrell.

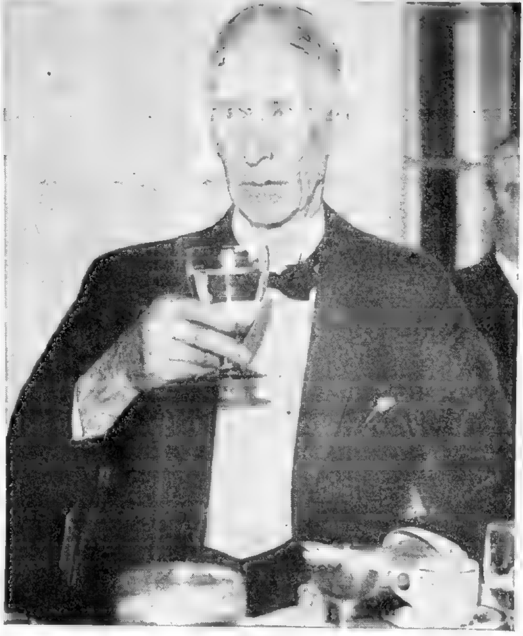
SOX BATTLE TO END

After that asinine decision, the Atheletics scored two more runs when the side should have been retired, for Roger Cramer the next hitter, flied out to Carl Reynolds.

There was the old ball game right on that play. If Connie Mack awards any varsity letters at the close of the season, he should not overlook Clarence Owens. "Brick" is entitled to his "A" on that decision.

Although the rabid fans will hold the defeat against them, at least until they win another ball game the Sox went down fighting. After kicking away the six run lead, they smacked out three hits to go out in front again in the last of the sixth, only to have Bob Johnson, pinch hitting for Lou Finney, bust one over the left field fence scoring "Pinky" Higgins.

The "A's" came up with three more in the ninth, by virtue of a couple of singles and a two bagger and an error but still the Sox refused to admit defeat. Carl Reynolds smashed one over third for two bases and scored when "Moose" Solters dented one of Bill Delaney's signs on the left field fence and pulled up at second. Then, after Ferrell had popped to Warstler, Walters smacked one of "Junior" Kline's fast balls over the wall for a home run. But, unfortunately the Sox were still one run shy of tying up the old ball game.



CONNIE MACK

"Goodness, gracious me, I wish I hadn't come." Connie Mack looks very guilty and rightly so. How's a fellow like Tom Yawkey going to enjoy a big banquet when a fellow like Mack brings his belittled A's to town and belts Yawkey's yeomen around! A real villain, the tall tactician, in the midst of the merry-makers. (Staff Photos.)

71-Year-Old Pilot of A's Is Big Hit at Sox Dinner

By Jack Conway

Connie Mack, 71-year-old manager of the Athletics, stole the show at the testimonial dinner to Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins of the Red Sox at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

"Nobody knows the game of baseball better than Boston fans," said Mack, "and now with Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins in charge of the Red Sox they are not only going to see a pennant winner in the American League, but they are also going to see a World Series again."

Mack spoke clearly and firmly. The master mind of the Athletics [illegible] as a new M[illegible] handed down the laws of [illegible] and predicted the future as [illegible] took flights into the past.

"Boston had a great team in the American League back in 1903 and 1904," declared the venerable leader. "Those were the days of the brilliant Jimmy Collins. In 1915 and 1916 you had the winning teams of Bill Carrigan.

"Bob Quinn later tried to give Boston a winning ball club, but failed through no lack of effort and ability on his own part.

"I had hoped that Eddie Collins would step into my shoes as manager of the Athletics. He then came to me, and found difficulty in telling me what was on his mind. I told him I knew what he wanted to tell to me, and I was glad to let him come to Boston.

"Eddie Collins and Tom Yawkey make a great baseball combination. There is no better."

Mack received a tremendous ovation before he started to speak, and when he completed his trib[illegible]

PROMISES WINNER

Tom Yawkey was very happy when he was introduced to the 1000 persons at the dinner by Toastmaster Dr. Edward J. O'Brien. The man who has invested $2,000,000 in the future of Boston baseball still has the sparkle of youth in his eyes. At the age of 31 he is the owner of a big league ball club, and the master of millions. His chief interest is baseball.

"The enthusiasm of the public and press toward the Red Sox and myself is very pleasing," said Yawkey. "The only thing for a man to do under the circumstances is to build a winning team.

"Eddie Collins and myself went ahead to do so, and we shall continue. I am thankful for this expression of good will. This is one of the most thrilling moments of my life."

Eddie Collins also told one of the most thrilling moments of his life. It was when Connie Mack welcomed him back to the Athletics after he was [illegible] a free agent after having been with the White Sox for 12 years.

EDDIE LAUDS CONNIE

Collins stated he received four attractive offers to go with other major league clubs following his return to the Athletics, but he refused them on account of his loyalty to Mack. He then told how he did not agree to come to Boston until first talking matters over with Connie.

Collins then asserted it was the schooling and lessons in tolerance and patience he received under Connie Mack which enabled him to gain what success he has [illegible]

I liked the message of good will which Judge Emil E. Fuchs of the Braves gave to Yawkey and Collins.

"I extend a message of good will to Tom Yawkey and to Eddie Collins," said the Judge. "They have shown courage and foresight in coming here.

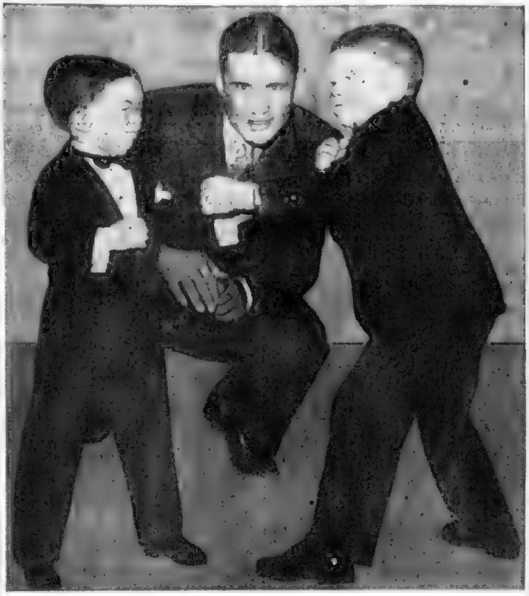
LUTZE BEATS RUSSELL AGAIN

Knighthood in Flower at Garden



You'd expect a Knight to be found where tilting foemen dare death or perhaps grave injury in gallant battle. And here he is, Joe Knight of Georgia, seeing to it that the battling midgets from the circus at the Garden observe correct fighting form. Knight battles Tony Shucco at the Garden on May 11. The Georgian is ranked by many second only to Champion Max Rosenbloom among the light heavies. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.

REBEL THROWN BY OWN PET LEGLOCK

There was little doubt in the minds of the wrestling followers today that Nick Lutze is the master of Rebel Bob Russell, surely mentally if not physically.

Nick scored his second victory over the wild Rebel in the main event of promoter Alex MacLean's show at the Arena before 8500 fans, winning the only fall in 1 17 11.

And he did it by again crossing up Russell. Russell is the inventor and perpetrator of a very torturous hold, the Japanese leglock so-called by mat scientists.

NICK TOO SMART

Russell thought he was the only man in the game who knew how to apply this hold, which he spent two years perfecting. Yet the score-board showed that Lutze won the fall and the match with the Japanese leg-lock.

Nick conquered Russell with his own hold in this return bout. Three weeks ago he stopped Russell by binding his hands with an adhesive tape bandage which Russell had ripped off Nick's arm in an attempt to expose an old injury.

In the semi-final Bull Martin was very mean and ungentlemanly to Chief Jules Strongbow, wrapping up the poor Indian in 14 43 with a top body press.

SASHA DOUBLE LOSER

The feature of the prelims found Sasha the Russian Cossack, going on a rampage after a fan had hit him on the head with a paper bag loaded with junk. The crazed Cossack flung his bathrobe at the fan and had it torn to something resembling ribbons.

Sasha lost the bathrobe and also his bout with Harry Lewis. He was disqualified in 9 30 for being too rough.

Other results: Gold Secret defeated George Saunders, 13 45. John Spelman and Joe Kujot drew. Nick Karavas defeated Eddie Musick, 8 40. Al Peckham and Frank Perry drew. Boris Demetroff defeated Ricardo Santo, 9.18.

Somerville Trounces Everett, 19-1

Jannacone and Pace Have Field Day at Bat (for Winners)

By Bill Connell

A wild batting streak gave Somerville High a 19-1 triumph over Everett at the latter's stadium in one of the heaviest hitting games of the school season. Somerville had all its varsity squad at the game and none of the boys could seem to miss hitting.

Doug McCaskill, senior at Somerville and an able left hander, checked the Everett hitters for seven innings. Dave White, big right handed tosser who is headed for stardom under Coach Charley Dickerman, finished up for Somerville and struck out four men in two innings.

Mundo Iannacone, outfielder and pitcher, and Cliff Pace, catcher, continue to pack the heaviest hitting punch at Somerville. Both have been slugging all season and will be a problem to Charlie O'Hara when the B. C. H. ace works tomorrow afternoon at Dilboy Field. Iannacone probably will start against B. C. High. He had a rough time last Saturday when Arlington downed Somerville, but has enough stuff to make tomorrow's game close.

Winchester took a tight Middlesex League game from Belmont, 9 to 8, with the victors making a dozen hits. Belmont hit hard but lack of pitching strength prevented the nine from winning. Belmont has a good team afield and at bat but there's not a first class tosser on the squad.

Joe Manzo of Medford High had a pleasant afternoon as he held Chelsea High to three hits while his mates were knocking out a 6 to 2 conquest, at Chelsea.

Another excellent game with good pitching on tap was staged with Pitcher Curtis of Milton Academy blanking Thayer with two hits as Milton won, 2 to 0.

The Wednesday rash of slugging broke out at Danvers, where St John's Prep edged Exeter, 10 to 9.

A top flight baseball game was staged at Malden High field with the home nine winning 7 to 6, over Dorchester High, in a thrilling 12 inning session.

Watertown High reached top place in the Mystic Valley League as it tripped Melrose 8 to 2 at Victory Field, Watertown. Don Lupo, brilliant left hander, pitched seven innings for Watertown, striking out 12 and allowing only two hits. Evidently Lupo is back in top form, which would make him an All-team probability.

Fred Ostergren's Arlington High nine added another win to its sparkling record by beating Commerce, 10 to 5, at Spy Pond Field in Arlington. Arlington with a win over Somerville among its big accomplishments of the year, ranks with the leading teams of the spring.

Terry's Son Fails as Pitcher

Memphis, Tenn., May 2 (AP)—Bill Terry Jr. isn't making such an auspicious start in the baseball world, especially as a pitcher.

So far, his Memphis University School "Giants" wearing old uniforms formerly worn by the New York Giants of Bill Terry, Sr., haven't won a game in their first four starts in the prep school league here.

Capt. Terry, just 15, started on the mound for the "Giants" again this week against Christian Brothers College. He retired to shortstop after two innings in which his opponents collected 11 hits and scored 12 runs. The final score was 18 to 3.

The week before, the Giants lost to Humes High, 18 to 0. Terry pitched four innings, during which he allowed four hits and nine runs. He finished the game at third base.

In a previous game against Catholic High young Terry struck out 11 batters, but allowed 12 hits and his opponents won, 10 to 3. Terry pitched the entire game.

Eddie Gallagher Out

Healey's Record Toss Comes Too Late for Jim Too See It

Old Olympic Discus Thrower Saw Find in Lowell Boy

By Walter Kiley

There is a little human interest story attached to Harvard's Jack Healey and his record smashing discus throw in the Greater Boston Intercollegiates at the Stadium. But the fellow who would have received the greatest kick out of the feat is no longer around. He died some years ago.

It is no far stretch of the imagination to visualize Healey, son of a Lowell tailor, as he picked up the discus on his record try, muttering to himself "Here's to Jim Andromedas."

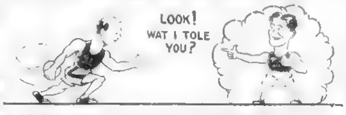
Jim, you see, was a member of the Olympic team at the games in Greece. He was a discus thrower.

Since then he has devoted his career to teaching weight throwing, for Jim was one of the world's stylists and his fame was wide spread.

Andromedas, who could toss that discus with one beautiful flowing movement, a poem of motion, some 147 feet, first selected Healey as a coming champion when the Crimson golfer and weightman was a schoolboy at Lowell High.

The pair became further intimate, to Healey's benefit, at Worcester Academy, where Coach "Jigger" Jones of the track team had Andromedas as an assistant for a year.

Throughout those few years Jim always proudly boasted:



LOOK!
WAT I TOLE YOU?

"Jack, he beat the world with the disk some day."

It seems Jim never did learn how to pronounce discus in spite of his constant and almost daily employing of it.

Jim's face would have lighted with one of his famous smiles if he could have been at the Stadium last Saturday.

For Healey, the student, made use of all the little tricks of the old master and with almost effortless ease sent a spinning metal disk 156 feet 6¼ inches for the new record, a far better achievement than that turned in as M. Zori of North Carolina bettered the Penn Relays mark on the same afternoon at Philadelphia.

It was only recently that a Lowell newspaperman was visiting Westlawn Cemetery and there found the grave of Andromedas.

There was no mark or tablet to identify it. Jim had just been laid to rest.

"Jim Andromedas, an Olympic Athlete."

Ball Retrieving Tabby Upsets Walker Cup Golf Practise

By Associated Press

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 3—The United States Walker Cup team whose members thought they had plumbed all the hazards of St. Andrews found a new one today in a ball retrieving cat which interfered with one of their foursomes on the 17th green.

Captain Francis Ouimet, Lawson Little, Johnny Fischer and Jack Westland had made their approaches and were preparing to putt when the big tabby came tearing across the road and took post near the cup.

Ouimet was the first to putt and it looked like his ball was headed right for the hole but the cat pounced on it and knocked it a dozen feet away.

The stunt got a big laugh from the crimson-gowned St. Andrews University students who apparently know the cat's habits but when it did the same to Westland's putt Little ran over and grabbed tabby and handed her to Harry W. Pierce, U. S. G. A. treasurer, who also was an amused onlooker. He and Fischer then sank their putts without interruption.

Ragged putting continued to be in evidence and added strokes to every card, Little Three putting five holes.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW
National Director

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Greetings, Junior Birdmen. Who won the Boston motto contest awards? Who are the four lucky members who will be sent on that wonderful week-end trip to New York city? Those are the two questions every member is asking himself and herself each day as they pick up the Boston Evening American and start reading the Junior Birdmen news of the day.

The judges report progress on [illegible] way toward selecting the [illegible] and the four names will [illegible] Junior Birdmen column of the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday. Don't fail to be up early Sunday morning and get the Advertiser to see if your name is among the winners.

I wish I could give you the names of the winners today, but it [illegible] job for the judges to [illegible] through thousands of [illegible] Many members sent in [illegible] twenty and thirty. The [illegible] number of mottoes sent in [illegible] Jean Hill of 443 Mer[illegible] Jean sent [illegible] and believe me that [illegible] I don't know yet if [illegible] winner among the [illegible] the judges will know soon [illegible] the [illegible] but [illegible] and on Sunday you [illegible] the names of the four winners.

These winners, accompanied by an adult representative of the Boston Evening American, are to spend a thrilling week-end of sightseeing in New York. They will leave on a Gray Line bus Friday evening for Providence, spend the night sleeping on one of the huge steamers of the Colonial Navigation Co. and arrive in New York Saturday morning. Bus tours, a visit to national headquarters of the Junior Birdmen, a trip to the top of the Empire building, theaters and other entertainment are on the program. They return Sunday night, arriving back at Boston at 8 o'clock Monday morning.

Gold and Silver Wings Now in Postmen's Hands

Here is more good news! The silver and gold wings to be worn by members of the Junior Birdmen are now leaving our Boston headquarters and are being distributed by the mail carriers. In fact, 600 of the pins, the most beautiful wings you ever saw, were dropped in the post office Tuesday night and have now been received. Watch for yours and when you receive your wings show them to your friends and tell them how to become a Junior Birdman or a Junior Birdwoman.

Tail Spin Unit Forming

Throughout the country our Junior Birdmen wings are reporting [illegible] receipt of [illegible] for membership from [illegible] licensed fliers. You know there are a great many licensed fliers within our age limits and I think we should put them in a unit of their own.

Not that they will be any different from us. Oh no, but sort of an honor. They will have the same privileges in Junior Birdmen activities but will have no added privileges.

However they will be entered in the "Tail Spin" Unit of our Junior Birdmen organization and a special file will be kept at Boston wing headquarters of the [illegible] in this territory so they may be called upon from time to time to assist in our program for field days and other similar activities.

The first tail spin member in the New York American wing, believe it or Ripley, is only 16. His name is Arthur Buchteckirck and he lives on Long Island. You have heard of Arthur before this for he made several flights which have won him page one news in the newspapers. After receiving his pilot's license last August, he undertook a flight to Montreal a week later, borrowing his instructor's Curtiss Fledgling and taking with him a friend. Arthur ran into a fog bank at Peekskill, was forced to veer from his course but arrived safely without much loss of time.

And now this same junior licensed flier writes to the Junior Birdmen for membership in our organization and thus becomes the first member of our New York wing "tail spin" unit. His letter reads:

Mr. Lawrence Shaw:

"I am 16 years of age, received my solo pilot license last August, made a flight to Montreal a few days later, and now have 38 hours flying to my credit.

"I think this should qualify me to become a member of the Junior Birdmen of America along with the many thousands of boys and girls whose interest will be in model-plane work. I enclose my membership application to become one of the first members.

"I am trying to make my life's work flying. I should be proud to be a member of your organization and help the boys and girls in their work. I know it shall be of great assistance to me, too, in my work to wear the wings of the Junior Birdmen of America.

Yours truly,
Arthur Buchteckirck.

Now who will be the first tail spin [illegible] Boston [illegible] years of age [illegible] and [illegible] experience [illegible] a member [illegible] girl [illegible] an active [illegible] her name [illegible] Birdmen and the [illegible] organization [illegible]

4 Winners and 3 Seconds Is How Wilson Picked 'Em

Did Dave Wilson, the premier handicapper of the Boston American, shake that winners tree at Pimlico yesterday and did nice, ripe juicy coconuts drop right into the players lap? Did they? Say listen!

Wilson picked no less than four winners at the Maryland course yesterday and three of his other selections ran second. He had Rhadamanthus to win the opener and the horse did, paying $7.90. His other winners were Chips in the fourth at $6.20; Chase Me in the fifth at $3.00 and King's Pleasure in the seventh at $6.20.

That's picking them and makes brighter one of the best records a handicapper has made in this section of the country.

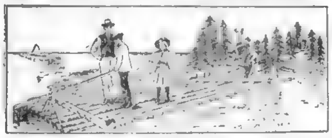
FRISBY TELLS OF PLAN TO ELIMINATE TAXES



(This is another excerpt from the unpublished memoirs of Congressman Frisby, as patched together from wastepaper basket scraps by his friends and admirers.)

WHILE I am the last man to suggest or advocate radical measures that would upset the delicate balance of our economic structure, I do believe something ought to be done to eliminate, or at least eradicate, burdensome taxes. I have given the matter a great deal of thought and I am modest enough to believe that I have hit upon a solution.

Taxes, as we all know, are levied on real estate. If we can eliminate real estate we eliminate taxes. My proposal is that we try to get everybody off the land. The rivers and lakes belong to us all. Nobody can be taxed for floating on a raft. Therefore, I believe it is practical to consider a plan to increase our floating population.

Why couldn't the tax-burdened people [illegible] up rafts? The little sketch above gives a hint of what I mean. Take a raft, plant trees on it, and you've got a mighty neat little livein'. When I get time, I want to suggest that experiments be made to prove that rafts, supporting good, fertile soil, will grow anything. Easy to irrigate, too! And the producer of crops can thus float, sail, or outboard motor directly to the consumer, providing, of course, that the consumers congregate on wharves. Next week I will try to "get over" the idea. I hope I do.

Getting back to Sanford Mills so that we may remind you that the company bought around 7,000,000 pounds of mohair at about 7 cents, it is easy to understand why the big Maine mill is making money. Since current prices for mohair are around 4 12 cents. On top of that Sanford is running at levels that are steadily close to capacity. Then a big contract from an important motor maker is rumored as about closed. In view of such developments, it is easy to understand why the shares are scarce in the over-the-counter market.

STOCKS STEADY AT CLOSE OF SESSION

New York, May 3—Stocks were barely steady at the close of today's dealings on the New York Exchange. Late selling brought losses in a fe wleaders. American Telephone after selling higher throughout the greater part of the session closed with a slight loss.

The nervousness which characterized yesterday's dealings was lacking for the most part and the selling pressure also appeared to have abated.

American Telephone, yesterday's most heavily sold issue, scored a fractional gain today. The rest of the utility list also showed a better tone.

Railroad shares were somewhat steadier. U. S. Steel and other industrials were quiet, but steady.

The commodity markets provided little incentive for a sizeable technical rally in stocks. Wheat ruled more than a cent under yesterday, cotton lost about 25 cents a bale, but silver in a sudden spurt soared a cent an ounce.

The motor shares were mixed with Chrysler rallying rather easily, while General Motors continued to meet with offerings.

Spiegel May Stern which dropped 10 points yesterday, gained a respite today and rallied moderately. Other specialties, chemicals, and aviations were quiet and slightly improved.

Stocks were generally higher at the start of the session, but irregularity ruled at the end of the first period. There were some large blocks pressed for sale at the opening, notably in Chrysler, Loew's and Pennsylvania, but these were taken at the previous close.

American Telephone, yesterday's weak spot, was steadied by short covering. Air Reduction advanced 2 points. American Sugar was a similar amount higher. U. S. Steel eased a minor fraction.

Scattered improvement occurred in the second hour. U. S. Smelting and American Sugar Refining extended earlier gains to around 3 points each. Trading continued dull into the noon hour.

Gains of a point or better were recorded by such issues as Allied Chemical, American Commercial Alcohol, Chesapeake Corporation, Columbian Carbon, Industrial Rayon, Johns Manville, Liquid Carbonic, Nickel Plate, U. S. Smelting, Spiegel May Stern and Ingersoll Rand.

Sales to noon approximated 570,000 shares.

Stocks continued to improve in the third hour with a few issues getting up as much as 3 points. These included American Sugar and U. S. Smelting. Spiegel May Stern, yesterday's weak spot, advanced more than 2 points.

Gains of a point or better were recorded by Allied Chemical, American Commercial Alcohol, American Smelting, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, Byers, Cerro De Pasco, Chrysler, Delaware, Lackawanna, Erie and Continental Can. Ingersol Rand was a point higher.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 710,000 shares.

Stocks did little in the fourth hour with leaders holding gains made in the earlier periods. Youngstown Sheet & Tube was around 2 points higher. Howe Sound, Liquid Carbonic, National Lead and United Carbon were a point or better higher.

Auburn, Chrysler, Mathieson Alkali and Johns Manville were up a point or better. U. S. Steel was a shade below its last closing price.

Am. Smelting Asks F.T.C. for Dismissal

Attorneys for American Smelting & Refining Co. of New York appeared before the Federal Trade Commission Wednesday and asked dismissal of complaint charging violation of the Slayton Anti-Trust Act through acquisition of capital stock of Federated Nickels Corp., New York which was reorganized to form Federated Metals Corp. of Delaware.

The commission stated that the Smelting company had exchanged $3,500,000 of its first mortgage 30-year gold bonds and $2,129,555 in warehouse certificates representing zinc, lead, copper and other marketable products for the capital stock of the old compny.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH AT BRYAN EXERCISES ON AIR THIS AFTERNOON

Daniels Also on Dedication Program

By N. F. T.

This afternoon brings an address by President Roosevelt from Washington (WEEI and WNAC) and being delivered on the occasion of his accepting a statue of William Jennings Bryan, spirited statesman and noted political figure of another day. This program is planned to strike the NBC and CBS network waves at 5 o'clock. Word in hand says the Chief Executive is expected to speak shortly after the opening of the period.

CABINET CONFRERE

Also taking part in the memorial "mike" ceremonies, the voice of Josephus Daniels is to be heard. He is head of the William Jennings Bryan Association, and was formerly Secretary of the Navy during the World War, a Cabinet member under Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Daniels is now ambassador from this country to Mexico and makes the special journey from below the Rio Grande to officiate at the above occasion.

Late tonight we hear again from the Capital City when Secretaary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace concludes the "America Must Choose" series of more or less controversial character. That's at 11:30 and lasting (WBZ) through to midnight.

WOOLLY WEST!

There's some tense drama promised while the "Death Valley Days" setting is sent out over the coast to coast channels (WBZ) tonight at 9 o'clock. It's the story of a big city woman who went to the plains against her will, but after almost unbelievable hardships, would not return to the crowded center she came from, even for burial at death.

Helen Jepson, rated by music critics (if you are up on your symphonic events) as one of the vocal "finds" of the year, enters upon a new series of studio song recitals as of tonight (WBZ) between 7:15 and 7:30 p. m. She is a lyric soprano, tall and blonde, hailing from Titusville, Pennsylvania. Her brief but eventful career has found her cast to date with the Philadelphia, Montreal and Atlanta opera companies.

PIECE ABOUT PENNER

In conclusion, your columnistic contributor here is working on a very special story about Joe Penner, the comic rage of radioland. It starts next Sunday in the columns of the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Quite as the benign "Old Maestro" Ben Bernie would say, here's hoping you like it—providing, of course, that you read it.

Red Cross Classes to Be Graduated

Graduation exercises for the Red Cross Home Hygiene and First Aid Classes will be conducted by the Boston Tuberculosis Association tomorrow evening, at the Everett school hall, Northampton st., Boston, at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Frederick T. Lord, member of the educational committee of the B. T. A., will present the speaker of the evening, Miss Frances Stern, director of the food clinic, Boston Dispensary. Rev. Leroy Ferguson will give the invocation.

Moosehead Lake Now Clear of Ice

Augusta, Me., May 3—Moosehead, Maine's largest lake was virtually clear of ice along the populated portions of its shore. The breakup several days earlier than usual prompted lake steamer operators to schedule trips for today.

Wardens reported to the State fish and game department that the ice today went out of Eagle and Portage Lakes, in Aroostook county.

THE THIN MAN -:- By Dashiell Hammett

"I'd like to have a drink before I could do any talking."

She cursed me and brought me a drink. "Has he confessed?"

"Why should he? You can't plead guilty of murder in the first degree. There were too many murders—and at least two of them were too obviously done in cold blood—for the district-attorney to let him plead guilty of second-degree murder. There's nothing for him to do but fight it out."

"But did he commit them?"

"Sure."

She pushed my glass down from my mouth. "Stop stalling and tell me about it."

"Well, it figures out that he and Julia had been gypping Wynant for some time. He'd dropped a lot of money in the market and he'd found out about her past—as Morelli hinted—and the pair of them teamed up on the old man. We're sicking accountants on Macaulay's books and Wynant's and shouldn't have much trouble tracing some of the loot from one to the other."

"Then you don't know positively that he was robbing Wynant?"

"Sure we know. It doesn't click any other way. The chances are Wynant was going away on a trip the 3rd of October, because he did draw five thousand dollars out of the bank in cash, but he didn't close up his shop and give up his apartment. That was done by Macaulay a few days later. Wynant was killed at Macaulay's in Scarsdale on the night of the 3rd. We know that because on the morning of the 4th, when Macaulay's cook, who slept at home, came to work, Macaulay met her at the door with some kind of trumped-up complaint and two weeks' wages and fired her on the spot, not letting her in the house to find any corpses or blood stains."

"How did you find that out? Don't skip details."

"Ordinary routine. Naturally after we grabbed him we went to his office and house to see what we could find out—you know, where-w e r e-you-on-the-night-of-June-6, 1894-stuff—and the present cook said she'd only been working for him since the 8th of October, and that led to that. We also found a table with a very faint trace of what we hope is human blood not quite scrubbed out. The scientific boys are making shavings of it now to see if they can soak out any results for us." (It turned out to be beef blood.)

"Then you're not sure he—"

"Stop saying that. Of course we're sure. That's the only way it clicks. Wynant had found out that Julia and Macaulay were gypping him and also thought, rightly or wrongly, that Julia and Macaulay were cheating on him—and we know he was jealous—so he went up there to confront him with whatever proof he had, and Macaulay, with prison looking him in the face, killed the old man. Now don't say we're not sure. It doesn't make any sense otherwise. Well, there he is with a corpse, one of the harder things to get rid of. Can I stop to take a swallow of whisky?"

"Just one," Nora said. "But this is just a theory, isn't it?"

"Call it any name you like. It's good enough for me."

"But I thought everybody was supposed to be considered innocent until they were proved guilty and if there was an reasonable doubt, they—"

"That's for juries, not detectives. You find the guy you think did the murder and you slam him in the can and let everybody know you think he's guilty and put his picture all over newspapers, and the district-attorney builds up the best theory he can on what information you've got and meanwhile you pick up additional details here and there, and people who recognize his picture in the paper—as well as people who'd think he was innocent if you hadn't arrested him—come in and tell you things about him and presently you've got him sitting on the electric chair." (Two days later a woman in Brooklyn identified Macaulay as a George Foley who for the past three months had been renting an apartment from her.)

"But that seems so loose."

"When murders are committed by mathematics," I said, "you can solve them by mathematics. Most of them aren't and this one wasn't. I don't want to go against your idea of what's right and wrong, but when I say he probably dissected the body so he could carry it into town in bags I'm only saying what seems most probable. That would be on the 6th of October or later, because it wasn't until then that he laid off the two mechanics Wynant had working in the shop—Prentice and McNaughton—and shut it up. So he buried Wynant under the floor, buried him with a fat man's clothes and a lame man's stick and belt marked D. W. Q., all arranged so they wouldn't get too much of the lime—or whatever he used to eat off the dead man's features and flesh—on them, and he re-cemented the floor over the grave. Between police routine and publicity we've got more than a fair chance of finding out where he bought or otherwise got the clothes and stick and the cement." (We traced the cement to him later—he had bought it from a coal and wood dealer uptown—but had no luck with the other things.)

"I hope so," she said, not too hopefully.

"So now that's taken care of. By renewing the lease on the shop and keeping it vacant—supposedly waiting for Wynant to return—he can make sure—reasonably sure—that nobody will discover the grave, and if it is accidentally discovered, then fat Mr. D. W. Q.—by that time Wynant's bones would be pretty bare and you can't tell whether a man was thin or fat by his skeleton—was murdered by Wynant, which explains why Wynant has made himself scarce. That taken care of, Macaulay forges the power of attorney and, with Julia's help, settles down to the business of gradually transferring the late Clyde's money to themselves. Now I'm going theoretical again. Julia doesn't like murder, and she's frightened, and he's not too sure she won't weaken on him. That's why he makes her break with Morelli—giving Wynant's jealousy as an excuse. He's afraid she might confide to Morelli in a weak moment and, as the time draws near for her still closer friend, Face Peppler, to get out of prison, he gets more and more worried. He's been safe there as long as Face stayed in, because she's not likely to put anything dangerous in a letter that has to pass through the warden's hands, but now . . . Well, he starts to plan, and then all hell breaks loose. Mimi and her children arrive and start hunting for Wynant and I come to town and am in touch with them and he thinks I'm helping them. He decides to play safe on Julia by putting her out of the way. Like it so far?"

"Yes, but . . ."

"It gets worse as it goes along," I assured her. "On his way here for lunch that day he stops and phones his office, pretending he's Wynant, and making that appointment at the Plaza, the idea being to establish Wynant's presence in town. When he leaves here he goes to the Plaza and asks people if they've seen Wynant, to make that plausible, and for the same reason phones his office to ask if any further word has come in from Wynant, and phones Julia. She tells him she's expecting Mimi and she tells him Mimi thought she was lying when she said she didn't know where Wynant was, and Julia probably sounds pretty frightened. So he decides he's got to beat Mimi to the interview and he does. He beats it over there and kills her. He's a terrible shot. I saw him shoot during the war. It's likely he missed her with the first shot, the one that hit the telephone, and didn't succeed in killing her right away with the other four, but he probably thought, she was dead and, anyhow, he had to get out before Mimi arrived, so he dropped the piece of Wynant's chain that he had brought along as a clincher—and his having saved that for three months makes it look as if he'd intended killing her from the beginning—and scoots over to the engineer Hermann's office, where he takes advantage of the breaks and fixes himself up with an alibi.

Syrup on House Attracts Bees

Pittsfield, May 3—Frank Wilson and his family have had the novel experience of being besieged in their house by a great swarm of bees, and a crew of house painters gets the blame.

When they mixed their paint, the painters used three gallon cans of maple syrup instead of three similar-looking cans of linseed oil that stood nearby. When the syrup-sweetened paint was spread on the house it attracted most of the bees in Berkshire county, and the family did not dare venture outdoors until nightfall, when the bees left.

Rushmore Visit Inspires Interest in Competition

Dolores M. Kupitz, state regent of the Catholic Daughters of America in North Dakota, reports to the National headquarters of the Mount Rushmore National Inscription Committee that the contest is invoking widespread interest in the Northwest.

Miss Kupitz has just returned from a trip to the Black Hills, where the heroic monument is being carved out of the everlasting granite. She says in her letter to the Mount Rushmore Editor:

"My family and I spent several days in the Black Hills and saw at first hand the work being done by Gutzon Borglum, sculptor of this impressive memorial.

"The work is so marvelous that it holds onlookers spellbound and this competition to find an inscription for the colossal monument is exciting extraordinary interest everywhere."

Every mail brings inquiries to the local Rushmore editor. Many of them ask where rules and list of prizes may be obtained.

All this information is fully covered in the Boston Sunday Advertiser every Sunday and from time to time in the Boston Evening American.

The rules state emphatically that the text must consist of 600 words and NOT MORE THAN 600 WORDS. The nine epochs also printed in conjunction with the rules MUST be the basis for the text.

The closing time for the contest is now May 30

Improved Police System for Bay State Needed

THE people of Massachusetts demand an organized and unified police system that will effectively put an end to organized banditry.

If the criminals of the underworld can organize for their depredations upon the public, at least the public must organize in self-defense.

In the State of Massachusetts, we have in excess of 100 independent police departments. Their cost to us rises $16,000,000 annually. If you add to that the enormous cost of crime to the public, you will get some appreciation of the ultimate and staggering expense of ineffective police protection from crime.

These police departments are haphazard. They have only a casual relationship with each other. They are like a divided army. Attack the weakest unit of it and the attack is successful.

TO BE effective, the army of police must be co-ordinated. They should have identical signal systems. They should have a central headquarters for the identification of criminals through the fingerprint and photogrargph. They should have mobile detective forces and fast cruising corps, capable of being thrown at once into any section of the State where felonious crimes are abundant. They should be commanded by a single general or Field Marshal just as Foch was given supreme command of the divided Allied Armies and thereupon brought victory out of the impending defeat and disaster.

All these measures are very simple and they would be very effective. They can be adopted without depriving the local police departments of the home rule upon which they pride themselves.

We have in the State Police the nucleus of an efficient detective force. They should be enlarged and they should be strengthened by drawing to them the ablest detectives in the local police departments. When crime abounds in any section of Massachusetts, it is a threat to the peace and safety of Massachusetts as a whole, and the unified strength of Massachusetts should be combined against it.

GIVE to the people of Massachusetts a strong, central detective service, patterned after Scotland Yard. Give to them a training school, in which young policemen may be educated in the finest arts of police defense. Give to the State the right to commandeer the services of the best-trained men in the local police departments when felonies are to be prosecuted and convicted.

Doing these things, the Legislature of Massachusetts will have performed the public service which the people now expect of them. The public are not willing longer to see their public officials stand submissive and helpless in the face of the crime wave. Their right to the possession of life and property, unhampered by the assaults of organized criminals, are too precious to be ignored forever.

Welfare Money Wasted

The Boston City Council estimates that one-tenth of the $14,000,000 now being expended annually for public welfare is wasted upon frauds, cheats and petty racketeers.

In other words, $1,400,000 of the taxpayers' hard-earned money is being collected by common chiselers who have no claim upon charity, either legally or in good morals.

The City Council tells us the familiar old story:

Public employes accepting doles under false names.

All these types violate the good name and sweet purpose of charity. And it is further significant that the appropriations for public welfare have steadily increased while the national government has poured in millions for public works and civil works relief.

The Civil Works program has been essentially one of charity. Men have been set to unimportant tasks in order that they might receive an income without the stigma of a dole. Yet it seems to be evident that the city authorities have permitted the public welfare rolls to expand while the national government, through its Civil Works program, has been definitely seeking to rescue the cities from the enormous burden.

The Boston Evening American exposed this racketeering under the guise of public welfare several months ago and Mayor Curley then launched an investigation which, for the time being at least, brought some semblance of decency to the situation. The latest revelations by the City Council only emphasize that the public must be constantly alert unless their funds are to be squandered and abused.

Mayor Mansfield has now designated a new Public Welfare Board, headed by Felix Vorenberg, and including Miss Frances G. Curtis, James A. McMurray of the St. Vincent de Paul Society and Dr. Frank M. Leonardi. They are capable persons. Mr. Vorenberg is to be admired that, with his many private interests, he will find the time to serve the public in this important work, which requires sound business judgment as well as sympathy for his fellow-man in distress.

The new Board has plenty of work to do, and its first task will be to place the welfare distribution upon a sensible, humane and business-like basis that will command the respect of all citizens.

Our people have responded nobly in the crisis from which we are now emerging. They have contributed to charity with a lavish hand. They will not, however, permit their generosity to be exploited forever.

Promotion Deserved

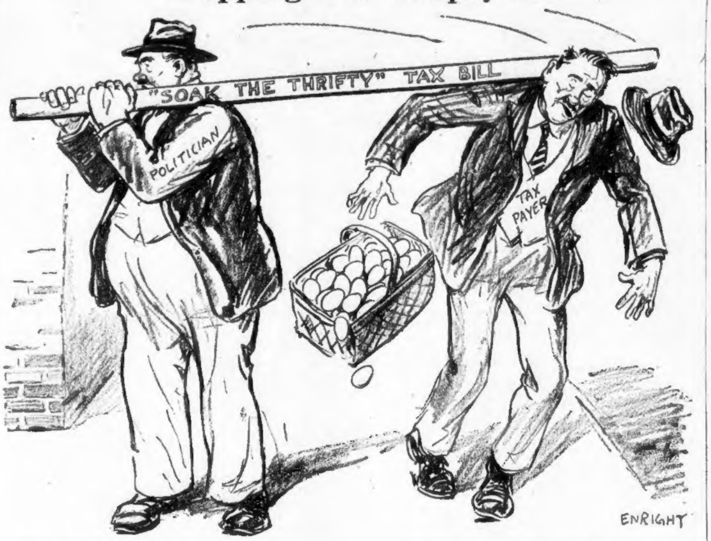
Charles F. Cotter has been appointed Regional Director of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for New England. If there ever was a deserved promotion in the public service it is this one.

Government relief to distressed home-owners has functioned well in Massachusetts, even if it has been a disappointing failure as yet in several other Commonwealths. Some 5000 home-owners have been rescued from the discomfort and embarassment of eviction with their families and another 5000 homes will have been completely protected from the same plight ere this year is ended.

As a consequence, $40,000,000 of government bonds will have been substituted in this State alone for frozen mortgages. The banks will obtain liquid assets, strengthening their condition. Cities and towns will receive taxes now in arrears. More important, 10,000 families will be saved the ugly, dispiriting threat of eviction which has hung over them.

Massachusetts has progressed so well in this government program because of the efficient leadership of Mr. Cotter and because of the able and humane organization with which he has surrounded himself. It is to be hoped that Daniel LeHand, his successor for Massachusetts, will prosecute ably the work so well undertaken by Mr. Cotter.

'Tapping' the Taxpayer



"Soak the rich!"

Under that false and deceptive slogan politicians at Washington have concocted another iniquitous income tax measure.

But facts and figures prove that the income tax does NOT soak the rich.

It soaks THE THRIFTY—both the thrifty business enterprise and the thrifty worker—and it drives surplus capital out of productive undertakings into tax-exempt securities.

Congress should heed the warning issued this week by the Committee on Federal Taxation of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Asserting that the income tax system is on the verge of a breakdown, the committee said:

> "In view of the dependence which has been placed on it, the breakdown of the income tax would be disastrous to the Government from the revenue standpoint.
> "Danger of such a breakdown has ALREADY APPEARED."

It is not too late for Congress to get the Government out of this hazardous position.

Instead of the racketeering income tax system the country should adopt the GENERAL MANUFACTURERS' SALES TAX, which Canada has found to be equitable and effective.

Listen World!

By Elsie Robinson

WISH FOR SOMETHING! Always there is a wish going on inside you.

No matter who you are, or what you are doing, always there is a wish going on inside you—turning, twisting, reaching out blindly toward something greater, something more free and proud and powerful than your present life.

Elsie Robinson

It is not a definite wish. You cannot put it into words. You FEEL rather than THINK it, and sometimes that feeling is deeply overlaid with the rush of your outside life. But always the wish goes on inside you, night and day—like a wild song, crying, crying—like a wild wind, flying, flying.

But the song never sweetens into a sustaining harmony.

And that secret wish goes on crying, crying; flying, flying; without theme or direction; scattered, wasted by its own wildness.

So your life comes to nothing, in spite of your continual wishing for greater things. Outwardly you are busy. You work furiously at many jobs. You boast that "there isn't a lazy bone in your body." You take chances; spare no effort to make good; yet your life comes to nothing.

YOUR LIFE COMES TO NOTHING BECAUSE SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT OF ITS ENERGY AND INITIATIVE IS WASTED.

That wish which is always going on inside you is the most important part of your life. All your outward assets and activities which seem so important, are trivial in comparison with that inner urgency. Your strong body, with its muscles and organs — your physical health—your education — your social position—your job—your political pull—all these things, which seem so valuable to you, are trivial besides that secret wonder and restlessness which possess you.

But you don't!

Chances are, you never even thought of it as a force. All your life a wish has been going on inside you, but you have thought it "just one of those things." You have never considered it seriously—never tried to control or direct it—never tried to shape it into any definite purpose or power.

IT CAN BE DONE.

That inner urgency can be concentrated, controlled, trained, directed, just as your muscles can be controlled and directed. When you are still a baby you learn how to reach, how to clutch with your hands without fumbling or stumbling, without lost motion.

BY EXACTLY THE SAME USE OF WILL POWER YOU CAN TRAIN YOURSELF HOW TO REACH, HOW TO CLUTCH, WITH YOUR MIND. YOU CAN TRAIN YOUR WISHES JUST AS YOU CAN TRAIN YOUR HANDS.

IT HAS BEEN DONE.

Every human being who has ever amounted to anything has had to do it. No man or woman ever achieved any sort of success by OUTWARD EFFORTS, OUTWARD CONTACTS. They achieve success by harnessing that wish which was going on inside them — BY PUTTING THAT WISH TO WORK.

Successful men and women must face something much harder than the sacrifice of pleasure or leisure. They must sacrifice their inner wildness—their inner laziness and haziness—their secret day dreams and tantrums. And that secret sacrifice and control is the cruelest discipline on earth. But no life amounts to anything without it.

That is why great scientists, great artists, engineers, statesmen, adventurers and merchants accomplish something. They use all their lives. Their inner forces work for them as hard and as constantly as their outer forces.

"Oh, it's easy enough for people like that to make good," you say, enviously. "They've got talent! Their wishes mean something. But look at me! I haven't any talent. What chance have I? I'm just a common mutt!"

That may be so. Most of us are common mutts. But the wishes of a genius would accomplish no more than the wishes of a common mutt—if he let them scatter. And a common mutt can work as great a miracle with his life as a genius—IF HE WILL PUT HIS WISH-FORCE TO WORK.

Meaning what? Meaning that YOU can start living that great life which you desire TODAY—THIS HOUR—if you will get busy and do a job on yourself. It may be futile to wish for genius, but you can achieve those qualities which make for great living IF YOU WILL CONCENTRATE ON WISHING FOR THOSE QUALITIES, INSTEAD OF DRIFTING IN DAYDREAMS, WALLOWING IN SELF-PITY, WASTING YOUR LIFE IN RESENTMENT.

You may never be able to build a bridge, write a book or boss a nation, partner. BUT IF YOU WILL USE THE SECRET WISH-FORCE WHICH YOU ARE NOW WASTING, YOU CAN MAKE A FULL ADVENTURE OF YOUR LIFE. YOU CAN FIND AND GIVE PLEASURE, POWER AND PEACE. And the secret is simple.

Wish for SOMETHING — instead of just wishing!

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

This is the treacherous time of the year, when the "line of least resistance" is the heart line.

Before marriage, a man seems to think that a girl's clothes simply grow on her. After marriage, he is surprised and aggrieved when she doesn't go right on producing them in the same inexpensive way.

Helen Rowland

It thrills a girl to watch the screen heroine being bullied by the ruthless, he-man lover; but she doesn't realize how tiresome it becomes after a few years, to have to supply all the couresty and tenderness around the house or to leap to duty like a fireman every time he gives an order.

To keep a man interested in your kisses, always let the supply be a little less than the demand. Wheat and cotten aren't the only things in this country which has suffered from over-production.

The average normal woman is capable of only one real love in a life-time; but nowadays she seems to have to do such a lot of experimenting in order to decide WHICH one.

Nothing spoils a man's memory so quickly as the habit of making large and glittering promises to a woman.

Divorce is no longer a mark of social distinction. One merely accepts these changes of matrimonial partners, as one accepts a woman's change of cooks or a man's change of address.

Every man claims that he likes a girl with plenty of good hard common-sense; but when he meets that sort, he has a chilly feeling that she may be using it to size him up with—and promptly looks around for a dumb-bell.

When a modern bachelor steps up to the altar and actually signs away his freedom it shows remarkable strength of character—on the part of the girl.

Nothing gives you such a warm glow around the heart as to meet a young couple and discover that even being MARRIED to each other hasn't managed to rub all the glamour off their love.

FREEDOM

Said she to me, "I must be free,
    Despite what others think or say,
To do what's happiest for me,
    And walk the world my chosen way.
Convention must not hold me back
    Nor rule me with its small commands.
I must be honest though I lack
    One friend who fully understands."

"Suppose," said I, "for happiness
    You broke with all the laws of men
To live in utter selfishness,
    Think you you'd have your freedom then?
Ah, no. There'd still be many laws
    With penalties which must be paid,
And which however gay the cause
    No living person can evade.

"But drink one cup of wine too much
    For pleasure's sake, 'twill dull your brain,
Or carelessly a firebrand touch
    And you will pay for it with pain.
'Tis joy to dance, but if too long
    You trip to music, soon or late,
You'll find no one is made so strong
    The laws of life to violate.

"From birth to death we live our lives
    Within a universal plan,
And only he for long survives
    Who heeds the laws of God and man.
'Tis sad to think that we are made
    Subject to folly, hurt and pain;
But thus our course through life is laid
    And freedom we can never gain."

Human Side of the News; Some Curious Crimes

By Edwin C. Hill

Burglars in Brooklyn walk away with a 400 pound safe. Thieves in the West make away with a freight car full of silk. Still another instance of heavyweight larceny which pops to mind is the stealthy removal, in the dead of night, of a marble monument from a graveyard, total weight more than a ton. But there are other innumerable instances of such curious crime, as Popular Science Monthly tells us.

On a bright sunny morning, the manager of a Long Island, New York, golf club began his round of inspection. He whistled as he walked over the velvety fairway. Then the sun seemed to stop shining, at least for the manager. His fifth green, his favorite, was gone. Two detectives, after four days of work, found that lost green. It was found neatly stacked in a cemetery, miles from the golf course. The thrifty keeper had purchased the truckloads from some young man, he said. And that was that.

Last winter some unusual jobs were pulled off. A quantity of ice was stolen from a city reservoir in New York State. The ice was expeditiously harvested and removed—a cool job, if there ever was one. And who could hope to identify ice as his own property? Following close on this theft, Boston thieves lifted half a million razor blades from a garage, where they were stored awaiting shipment. Sharpers along a different line caused an unexpected drought some months ago. In the dead of night they carted away a half-mile of lead pipe from the Enfield, Mass., water system.

GIGANTIC OIL THEFT

A million barrels of crude oil is another item on this list of bigger and bolder robberies. Not long ago, Texas Rangers placed a dozen men under arrest in the East Texas oil fields on a charge of tapping pipe lines from five wells and stealing that amount of crude oil. Two million wasps formed the strange loot of thieves in another large scale robbery in California. The insects, known as gall wasps, were stolen from the fig ranch of Dr. H. C. Moore, near Merced. These insects, which produce balls on the leaves of oak trees, are bred in large numbers for use in the fig orchards where, in laying their eggs, they fertilize the blossoms by carrying pollen from flower to flower.

For sheer nerve it would be difficult to outrival the "live-wire" thieves of Michigan. Last October officials of the Consumers Power Co. were dumbfounded when told that 150 miles of copper wire had vanished from the high tension lines between Grand Rapids and Marshall. The lines at the time were carying a heavy load of current. The robbers must have climbed the steel towers, risking instant death, to cut loose the heavy wires.

WEIRD EXPERIENCE

Last spring Joseph A. Fuerstamn, a lawyer of Newark, N. J., had a most weird experience. He repaired his 2½-story frame house, built a new fence around it, and offered it for rent. A month later, when he went to look at it, he found only the cellar left.

In Rockville Center, Long Island, Fred Willard returned with his wife from a moving picture show and turned his car into the driveway. He could scarcely believe his eyes. A fifteen-foot flowering magnolia tree, which had been in full bloom on the lawn when they left for the theater, had disappeared. Neighbors recalled having seen a truck, apparently having motor trouble, stop in front of the house and a gang of men dismount. No attention was paid to them and the tree was not missed until the owners returned.

But all these instances of thievery fade into insignificance before the exploits of European masters. In one small country, a firm was employed to build a tunnel, in territory formerly Austrian. For seven years regular reports showed the progress of the tunnel, men employed, material removed, and so on. The Government paid the contract price, and at the grand opening officials found a few workmen cleaning up the debris. The tunnel was there and the contractors were congratulated.

An engineer, celebrating too boisterously the completion of of his arduous task, proved the undoing of these "contractors." He revealed that the tunnel had been dug years previously by Austrian and German troops, who had abandoned it when the war front shifted. The firm had received five and a half million dollars for digging a hole in the ground that already existed.

If that seems incredible, what of the discovery announced by the Prime Minister of Rumania? He reported that an entire railroad—rails, ties, switches, spikes, even rolling stock and signal system—had completely disappeared. Constructed in wartime from Cluj, Transylvania, to Jacoben, Rumania, it cost almost four million dollars. Apparently it had been dismantled piecemeal and the parts sold without exciting suspicion.

Roosevelt Fails to Check Growth of Spoils System

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Soon after President Roosevelt entered the White House, the public was encouraged to believe that the merit system of federal appointments would be greatly extended under his administration. In fact, the promise was volunteered specifically that the President would urge upon the Congress the merit system of appointments throughout the postal service.

This has not been done. There appears to be little chance of its being done before Congress adjourns. The failure to make this extension months ago has lowered the standard of federal administration, and the dissatisfaction in congressional districts over the distribution of patronage will probably cost many a Democratic congressman his renomination in the coming primaries of his part.

FOUR FACE BATTLE

Four of the eight members of the Oklahoma delegation, for example, face hard fights for renomination. Their most formidable opposition comes from the dissatisfaction of their constituents over the exploitation of the federal service by the appointment of incompetents to fill vacancies in the postal service and other federal agencies. The Oklahoma situation does not differ in this respect from that in many other states.

The theory that patronage is a political asset to a senator or a representative in Congress is not well founded. For example, every time a Congressman recommends a constituent for appointment as postmaster he is apt to make more opponents than supporters. This inevitably follows when a member of Congress utilizes his federal patronage to pay his political debts at the expense of the public interest.

PATRONAGE A PROBLEM

More than half the letters received and replied to by many representatives in Congress, affiliated with the party in power, have reference to the distribution of the patronage actually or supposed to be at the disposal of the Congress.

Much of the time of members of Congress, which ought to be devoted to the study of public questions, the scrutinizing of federal administration and the consideration of federal legislation, is now squandered upon the search for or distribution of federal jobs for needy or greedy constituents.

When the Roosevelt administration entered power, it was estimated that there were over 5000 excepted positions, exclusive of postmasterships, which could be covered into the competitive service, and thereby protected against political exploitation by executive order of the President.

During the last year, many new positions have been created which have been filled not by the merit system but the spoils system. Only the other day, Congress overwhelmingly rejected a proposal to give to the Home Owners Loan Corporation civil service protection against porkbarrel politicians.

Most of the federal offices at present excepted from competitive examinations have been excepted by special acts of Congress. This means that both the President and the Congress must act if the federal service as a whole is to be taken off the political pie-counter and put under the merit system.

If the President, however, would lead in this movement by going to the limit of his authority in extending the merit system by executive order, public sentiment would not only accept his leadership but would also help to turn Congress in the same direction.

AIRMAIL WRECKED

The wrecking of the federal airmail by politicians, the disruption of the aeronautic branch of the Department of Commerce by politicians, the contamination of many federal relief agencies by politicians, the exploitation of the Home Owner Loan Corp. by politicians, the filling of so many federal offices under the Department of Justice by politicians, reveal the rapidity with which the spoils system is defeating the merit system to the demoralization of the federal service.

Because of his tremendous popularity and the resultant strength of his leadership, President Roosevelt's opportunity to call a halt upon these raids of the spoilsmen was never greater than it is today.

And until the legislative branch of the federal government is liberated by executive action and legislative enactment from the curse of distributing patronage, many a senator and representative in Congress will find himself so swamped with "patronage troubles" that he will have far less time than he requires to devote to his legitimate duties as a legislator for the nation.

Daily Bible Text

—Psalms cxxviii, 1.

By Rev. E. Ledden, Mathewson St. Methodist Church, Providence, R. I.
